WHITEAWAY'S

SERIOUS CLASH IN CAIRO

POLICE FORCED TO FIRE ON MOB

POLITICAL FEELING AT DANGER POINT

Cairo, Nov. 13.

There were further disturbances here this evening, following a huge Wafdist mass meeting which passed a resolution for non-co-operation with Great Britain and demanded the resignation of Nessim Pasha's Government.

The situation took a decidedly serious turn when angry crowds attacked police with bottles and stones. The police were forced to fire on several occasions, and it is understood there were many casualties on both sides.

The outbreak to-night was the climax of three days of political excitement over the attitude of Britain and the Egyptian constitutional question.

CASUALTY LIST

Cairo, Nov. 13.

Forty-five police were injured, thirteen of them seriously, during the rioting in Tanta, before the police opened fire on the crowd. One civilian was killed and three were seriously injured. The crowd burned a police lorry and motorcycle.—Reuter.

Particular criticism has been directed at Sir Samuel Hoare's speech at the Lord Mayor's banquet in London on November 9, in which the Foreign Minister declared that His Majesty's Government had advised against re-enactment of the 1923 and 1930 Constitutions on the grounds that the first was unworkable and the second was universally unpopular. Sir Samuel denied the return of a Constitution suited to Egypt's requirements, but it has been suggested that Britain has no intention of urging reintroduction of a Constitution. It was this suggestion that fanned the fire of unrest in Cairo to-night. Excitement was intensified when Wafdist late last night decided to withdraw their support from Nessim Pasha on the ground that he was not prepared to disregard the advice of Great Britain.—Reuter.

ITALIAN PLAN OF CAMPAIGN

WATER HOLES WILL BE SEIZED

TANKS' LOSS DENIED

Asmara, Nov. 13. General Griuziani's plan of advance in South Ethiopia will consist of seizing successfully a series of water holes, thus securing his communications. As the water holes are few and far between, they cannot be attacked except from long distances across the desert.

The advance will be made by mechanized units armed with machine-guns. On arrival at a water hole, the transport will be formed into a ring facing the desert. It will then await a relieving convoy, and on the latter's arrival the first convoy will make the next jump forward, leaving the water hole impregnable guard—Reuter.

LOSSES DENIED

Rome, Nov. 13.

The Ethiopian reports of the capture of Italian tanks and the killing of a number of officers near Dangabur is officially denied here.—Reuter.

MUNITIONS POUR INTO ETHIOPIA

GAS MASKS SOON TO ARRIVE

RAILWAY MAY BE CUT

Addis Ababa, Nov. 13.

With the removal of the arms embargo by various countries, munitions and medical supplies are arriving in considerable quantities.

Five thousand of the latest model quick-firing rifles and large medical stores have already been received, and 500,000 gas masks are expected any moment.

An interesting item in the latest consignment of war materials consists of 180 huge cases containing material for eight repair shops for rifles and machine-guns and four mobile field repair shops, which will be erected at selected spots under the supervision of European engineers.

Further consignments have been expedited in view of the threat from Italy to cut the Addis Ababa-Djibouti Railway and thus prevent the passage of armaments over the railway from French Somaliland.—Reuter.

Tigers' Owner Stricken

FRANK NAVIN DIES IN DETROIT

Detroit, Nov. 13.

Mr. Frank J. Navin, owner of the world's champion baseball club, the Detroit Tigers, which has just finished a spectacular season and snatched a reprieve from the epidemic of bank closings occurring during the past twelve years.

Mr. Navin died within an hour of falling from his horse at the Detroit Hunt Club. He was riding just ahead of his wife when he fell in the bridle-path. He was picked up unconscious, his hand clutching his heart.

Rushed to hospital, he died almost as soon as he arrived there, without regaining consciousness.—Reuter.

The Manila Observatory, reporting at 8:45 a.m. to-day, states that the typhoon is situated to the east of the Visayas Islands, moving W.N.W. or N.W.

AMERICA SLASHES DUTIES

RECIPROCITY TREATY

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1924. Received, November 14, 1935.)

Washington, Nov. 13.

Although the terms of the Canada-America trade treaty, which President Roosevelt has authorized the Administration to sign, are not yet published, it is believed that American products on Canada's preferential list include motor cars, iron and steel products, chemicals and certain textiles.

In return, the United States is making concessions with respect to cattle, milk and cream, and lumber.

Duties on numerous Canadian products, it is believed, will be reduced by fifty per cent, and Canada is granting the United States a special tariff, plus additional concessions, with an average reduction of over twenty-five per cent. in import duties.

The United States' reduction of duty on liquor reported to be fifty per cent., is limited to "American-type" whiskey, which can only mean rye and what is known to the trade as Bourbon, and this means that there will be no change in the duty on Irish and Scotch whiskey.—Reuter Special.

PERILOUS FINANCIAL SYSTEM

AMERICAN PEOPLE OVER-TAXED

New Orleans, Nov. 13.

Mr. J. F. T. O'Connor, addressing bankers here, predicted that deposit insurance corporations would be granted powers to prevent a repetition of the epidemic of bank closings occurring during the past twelve years.

Mr. Lewis Brown, President of the Johns Manville Company, spoke on the mounting cost of government, which, he said, is threatening the country with strangulation. He stated that taxes consume twenty per cent. of the national income and must be added to prices, limiting markets and restricting employment. United Press.

AIRWOMAN CROSSES ATLANTIC

SETS NEW RECORD FOR FLIGHT

JEAN BATTEN SUCCESSFUL

Port Natal, Brazil, Nov. 13. The New Zealand airwoman, Miss Jean Batten, has flown the South Atlantic in the record time of 14 hours 15 minutes, racing here from Dakar after a rapid flight from London, which she left on November 11.

Miss Jean Batten, who has created a record for a South Atlantic flight and has beaten Jim Mollison's record from Lympne to Port Natal.

Miss Batten's speed for the ocean flight of 1,860 miles, averaged about 130 miles per hour. She beat Jim Mollison's record of 82 hours 8 minutes from Lympne to Port Natal. Her time was 61 hours 15 minutes. The aviatrix arrived at Port Natal at 4:45 p.m. local time, 195 minutes ahead of the solo flight record for the crossing.—Reuter.

NO LIFE PROTECTION

Dakar, Nov. 13. Miss Jean Batten, the airwoman, who reached Dakar, near here, in two swift hops from London, left there at 5:30 a.m. to-day in an attempt to create a new solo record for the 2,000 miles crossing to Port Natal, Brazil. She carried no life protection apparatus. The present record for the crossing is held by the Spaniard, Compo, who made the flight in 16 hours 30 minutes.—Reuter.

DEATH SENTENCE ON RUSSIANS SPIES OF HARBIN GOVERNMENT

Khabarovsk, Nov. 13. The Red Army Tribunal has sentenced to death the Russians, Sorokin and Babkin, who emigrated to Manchuria and returned to Russia as "spies of a certain Government at Harbin." United Press.

SURVIVORS OF WRECK AT MANILA

TELL OF CAPTAIN'S BRAVE EXAMPLE

GRATEFUL TO U.S. NAVY

Manila, Nov. 14.

Carrying 43 survivors and two corpses (those of Mrs. Williams and Mr. Bernard MacPherson) from the freighter Silverhazel U.S.S. Peary docked here this morning.

One British and one Hindu, members of the crew, were immediately rushed to hospital, suffering from pneumonia. The Hindu is believed to be in a serious condition and has not much chance of surviving.

Mr. Norman Bloye, Chief Officer of the Silverhazel, interviewed by Reuter, said: "We are only too thankful to get here. Our being alive is entirely due to the U. S. Navy."

U.S.S. Bulmer, which stayed on the scene of the disaster until late yesterday afternoon searching for the bodies of Captain Leonard and other members of the crew, is expected in Manila about noon with the seven remaining survivors.

The survivors reaching here state that Captain Leonard gave an order to the crew to don life-saving jackets and leave the rock on which the vessel was wrecked, and then himself entered the water without a life-jacket, carrying a Scotch terrier on his shoulder. He was never seen again.—Reuter.

BRITISH TRADE CLIMBING

IMPRESSIVE TOTAL FOR 1935

London, Nov. 13.

On the eve of the general election, the preliminary figures dealing with overseas trade for October have been published. They show substantial increases in every direction.

Exports for the month are nearly £40,000,000 against £34,000,000 for September, and imports are £73,500,000 as against £61,000,000.

Exports from January 1 to October 31 totalled £362,000,000 compared with £326,000,000 for the corresponding period in 1934 and imports for the same period totalled £312,000,000 compared with £604,000,000.—Reuter Special.

JAPAN'S CONSUL TAKES ACTION

STRESSES FAILURE TO FIND KILLER

SEQUEL TO SHANGHAI OUTRAGES

Shanghai, Nov. 14.

The Japanese Consul-General, Mr. Itaro Ishii, to-day will call the serious attention of the Shanghai Municipal Police to the recurring anti-Japanese activities in the Foreign Settlement, he has announced. He will lay stress upon the failure of the police authorities to capture the murderer of the Japanese Marine on Sunday and upon the attack on a Japanese shop in Nanking Road on Tuesday.

Referring to the Nanking Road affair, Mr. Ishii said: "To-night's incident, coming at a time when the assassin of Warrant Officer Nakayama is still at large, is extremely regrettable."

"I intend to call the serious attention of the Shanghai Municipal Police to the matter as soon as the facts of the case are established. We cannot afford to have the culprits escape all the time," he said.

ITALY'S COUNTER SANCTIONS

NO CREDITS FOR FRENCH TRADE

DRASTIC ECONOMY

Rome, Nov. 13.

What is regarded as the first step of Italy's "counter sanctions plan" was taken to-day when regulations were issued abolishing credit for exports to France and her colonies. French commercial men must pay in advance for anything they may require from Italy.

It is not clear why the new regulations apply only to France, but the fact that a British importer of lemon oil from Italy was refused further credit and was told it was impossible for him to obtain goods unless or until he opened a credit with an Italian bank, apparently indicates the extension of the rule to Britain.

It is believed that Italy will meet the ban on her exports by an embargo on imports from countries supporting sanctions.

Meanwhile, the Press is campaigning to persuade the nation to economise drastically and cut down the consumption of imported goods, especially paper. Foreign goods have disappeared from the shop windows.—Reuter.

ITALIAN RETALIATION

Rome, Nov. 13.

It is indicated here that Mussolini's next step may be the suspension of all trade and financial relations with all nations co-operating in import restrictions.

The recent warning to the members of the League who are responsible for the penalties, are believed to be a prelude to this new measure. Continuing his preparation of sanctions which will become effective immediately, Mussolini has forbidden the export of 42 commodities including corn, barley, fruits, olive oil, nitro-benzol, graphite, antine, naphthol, rubber and benzol and the by-products and waste from these commodities.

Mussolini hopes to hurt the nations maintaining balances in Italian trade, notably Britain and France.

The Italians expect the British exporters to lose heavily through the penalties because importers will not honour outstanding bills which amount to £1,900,000 while the British owe Italy £350,000.

The League's calm reaction to Mussolini's note is calculated to cause considerable surprise since Continued on Page 12.

Meanwhile, the police are pressing their investigation of both incidents and have questioned a number of persons who were near the scene of the shooting in which the Japanese marine lost his life. But Mr. Ishii will make representations to the Municipal authorities this morning in any event.

JAPAN'S CHARGE

Soon after the attack on the Japanese shop in Nanking Road on November 12, Japanese military authorities charged the Chinese Government with a violation of its assurances regarding the suppression of anti-Japanese organizations. Handbills distributed on the scene of the attack on the Japanese shop, they alleged, were signed by an association which is closely linked with the Kuomintang headquarters.

The missiles used by the unidentified men consisted of a Japanese beer bottle, two jars of face cream, and a brick, and after these had been thrown, the men, after hastily distributing a number of handbills urging China, for its own salvation, to fight Japan, fled before the arrival of the police.

Immediately news of the incident reached the headquarters of the Japanese Landing Party, two marines were despatched to the scene by motor-cycle. They left shortly before ten o'clock, however, the work of investigation, being left to the Settlement Police. Up to a late hour last night, no arrests had been made. No one was injured.

EXTRA PATROLS ON DUTY

A guard was set over the shop by police from the Louza Police Station, and over two other Japanese shops, one a dispensary, in Canton Road. Extra men were sent out on patrol duty in the Central District, with special instructions to pay particular attention to any Japanese shops in the neighbourhood of their beats.

No other incidents of a similar nature were reported, while the evacuation from Chapei ceased at a fairly hour in the evening.

According to Rengo, violation of the Chinese Government's assurances regarding the suppression of anti-Japanese organizations was seen on the night of November 12 by the Japanese military authorities here.

The handbills distributed by the demonstrators were signed by the Anti-Japanese National Salvation Association, which, an official spokesman alleged, is closely linked with the Kuomintang headquarters.

CLEAR INTENTIONS

"We have demanded on several occasions that such bodies be dissolved. The existence of these organizations and their continued depredations clearly indicate to us what are the intentions of the Kuomintang," he declared.

"Should they let matters drag on, it might lead to a repetition of unfortunate incidents which may cause a reversal in the improving relations between China and Japan," the official told Rengo.

TERRIBLE CONDITIONS IN CONTINENTAL PRISONS

CHILDREN KEPT IN CHAINS

STANDING COFFIN PUNISHMENT

GRAVE charges of physical torture of prisoners in certain countries were made recently by Miss Cicely M. Craven, hon. secretary to the Howard League for Penal Reform.

Miss Craven was discussing amazing facts which are included in a report shortly to be placed before the League of Nations assembled by the Howard League.

Among the facts which investigations have brought to light are:—

Women and children confined in camps under sole supervision of male convict officers.

Chains up to 31lb. in weight imposed for 12 months continuously. Cross-bar fetters keeping legs 16 inches apart for 10 days continuously.

Girl of 18 kicked in the abdomen by guard; taken away unconscious and left in agony in cell for 24 hours before receiving attention. Later given nine weeks' solitary confinement for complaining.

Estimated normal prison death rate, 40 per cent.

Prison built to hold 3,300 containing 6,300 prisoners.

"In many countries," said Miss Craven, "corporal punishment is used recklessly without any safeguards against permanent injury."

"Solitary confinement, stripped naked in dark, damp, verminous cells is a common punishment for minor infractions of prison rules."

"In one country 'sweat boxes' standing coffins with just room for a man's upright body—are used to extort confession."

"The names of the States concerned are not given in the report," said Miss Craven, "as our experience has shown that to do so might bring further suffering on the prisoners."

"In two countries at least prisoners released from certain institutions are obliged to sign undertakings not to reveal facts of prison treatment on release."

"In another country it is a capital offence to do so."

The report is the result of an investigation lasting for more than two years.

TAUBER SUES FOR DIVORCE TO MARRY BRITISH FILM STAR

Vienna, Oct. 30.

So that he may be free to marry Diana Napier, the British film star, Richard Tauber, the singer, has sued his wife, Carlotta Tauber-Vanconti for divorce "on his wife's fault" in the Vienna courts.

The case was adjourned until December. Tauber was not in court, but is staying in Vienna.

He has since returned to England to act opposite Diana Napier in "Pagliacci."

Tauber married Frau Carlotta Vanconti, an opera singer in Vienna in 1924. They separated, and in 1931 the marriage was dissolved by a Berlin court.

The divorce, however, is not legal in Austria, so Tauber approached Frau Vanconti to consent to divorce before the Austrian courts. She refused. Since June Tauber has stopped payment of her allowance.

"I do not fight against divorce, but for my reputation as a woman and an artist," Frau Vanconti declared.—Reuter.

DIANA NAPIER

WENT ASTRAY, WRECKED A HOME

BECAUSE a telegram addressed to her was delivered to her husband, Mrs. Elizabeth Y. Ford, aged twenty-eight, of Newark (New Jersey), has obtained 3,000 dollars (£600) damages from the Western Union Telegraph Company.

Mrs. Ford alleged that this resulted in the breaking up of her home, and sued for 75,000 dollars (£15,000) for mental shock, pain, and anguish.

Marked "Personal" While she was visiting her mother in West Virginia, Mrs. Ford explained to the court, a friend of the family named Herbert Smith sent her a telegram at her home saying: "Stopping at New Yorker Hotel. If possible meet me Friday at hotel 7 p.m.—Herbert."

Mrs. Ford had no idea why Mr. Smith sent the message.

As the telegram was marked "Personal," the telegraph boy three times refused to deliver it to her husband. But Mr. Ford then sent a woman friend to the Western Union Office, and she obtained a copy of the telegram for him. Mrs. Ford said that she returned to find her husband in a suspicious frame of mind, and later he left her.

HALF A TON OF DRAGON FOUND

MARINE MONSTER

Approximately half a ton of fossilized dragon-like creature which existed in the great Australian inland sea, between 30 and 120 million years ago, has just been sent to the Queensland Museum by the finder, Mr. Edgar Young, an honorary collector for the museum.

The reptile is the largest marine monster of which remains have yet been found, states Austral News. It is estimated that it grew to 40 feet in length. The head alone was about six feet long and the jaws contained a hundred or more teeth at least eight inches long.

No fossils of the reptile have been found anywhere in the world other than in Queensland.

ZOO COBRA WAS SWALLOWED BY RIVAL SNAKE BUT KEEPER RESCUED HIM ALIVE

The reptile house at the London Zoo has been the scene of fierce dispute over food.

Two cobras began to fight over a rat and one of them became so enraged that he swallowed his rival.

About two-thirds of the swallowed cobra had disappeared down the throat of his adversary when the keeper arrived on the scene. The unfortunate reptile was pulled back to safety by means of a forked stick and was none the worse for the experience.

The final result of the Zoo python's effort to present the menagerie with its first family of home-bred baby pythons is a nursery containing five youngsters. Mother snake had laid no fewer than 40 eggs and all were fertile, but there were various complications.

Some of the eggs had become too dry and the pythons died before they hatched; a few of the babies seemed too shy to emerge, and others died soon after birth.

But the five survivors are strong and active and short-tempered. They are about 20 inches in length.

FOUGHT PET BABOON AT EDGE OF PRECIPICE

Capetown, Oct. 15.

AT the edge of a precipice near Harrismith (Orange Free State) the owner of a pet baboon found himself struggling for life with the beast, which was trying to push him over.

The baboon had behaved well before, except that it could not tolerate dogs.

It would destroy every dog it could find. At first it would pretend to be friendly with the dog until within striking range. Then the baboon would grab the dog, march off with it to a precipice 100 feet high, near the homestead, and hurl it to the rocks below.

Sudden Grab

Lately it had accounted for a few sheep in a similar manner, and its master, Mr. de Wet du Plessis, had begun to think seriously of destroying it.

He took it for a walk, and as they were passing the cliff where the animal had thrown over dogs and sheep, it suddenly grabbed its master round the waist and started to force him towards the precipice.

Mr. du Plessis tried to push it away, but every time he took hold of it the beast bit him, so that he had to use his fists and boots.

Step by step he was forced backwards towards the edge of the precipice. In despair he swung an uppercut at the baboon's jaw. This knocked it out. Mr. du Plessis looked round and found that he was no more than five feet away from the edge.

The baboon, still dazed, was secured with reins, led back to the house, and shot.

According to a local hunter who has shot baboons for many years in the Cape Province, it was the largest specimen of the grey mountain baboon he had ever seen. He considered that it weighed nearly 150 pounds.

30,000,000 BRITONS WILL CAST A

VOTE TO-DAY

MOMENTOUS ELECTIONS IN FOUR COUNTRIES

London, Nov. 14.

Approximately 30,613,000 electors are eligible to vote for the 615 members of the new House of Commons to be elected to-day, according to the new register just issued.

There are 14,430,000 men and 16,183,000 women, making the largest electorate in British history.

The previous electorate for England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland was about 29,960,071 and men outnumbered women by approximately 1,750,000.

A century ago the electorate totalled only half a million. Until the reform act of 1918 when women of 30 years of age and over were given the vote the electorate never numbered more than eight million. An additional five million women were added in 1928 when the franchise was extended to women on the same terms as to men.

PASTOR GIVES 6 RULES FOR KEEPING YOUNG

Auburn, Oct. 15.

This prescription for keeping young was given Kivonians by the Rev. George E. Davis:

Keep your eagerness for new experiences.

Keep the confidence of youth.

Never despair.

Do not try to keep up with youth in their living habits.

Take to heart youth's ability to overlook petty annoyances.

Make a life, not a living.

Temples Looted For Relics?

ART treasures and relics worth thousands of pounds stolen from Chinese temples are finding their way into Britain, according to the London Sunday Chronicle.

It is one of the biggest "rackets" of modern times.

A man who has just returned after spending 30 years in China, told the Sunday Chronicle that he has identified articles which are almost priceless in China.

They are being taken over at ridiculous prices, because even the men who are selling them do not know what they are actually worth.

"Over there," he said, "one of the biggest thieves campaigns ever organized is baffling the police."

"Priceless pieces of jade, golden Buddhas, poem boxes containing the original works of the country's most illustrious poets, bronze figures, temples cut out of solid ivory, and other items, some of which are thousands of years old, are being smuggled out of the country."

Clever Leader

"One of the biggest men in the 'racket' is a former Russian Prince, but the police have been unable to get sufficient evidence against him. He is too careful."

"I have been in touch with people who have bought many of these time-honoured relics looted from temples and other places," he added. "They are now decorating sideboards and other pieces of furniture."

At least 80 per cent. of the electors are expected to cast their ballots, a total of nearly 25,000,000 compared with about 23,000,000 in 1931.

All persons twenty-one years of age or over, except royalty, peers, aliens, bankrupts, lunatics and idiots, are eligible to vote, unless, by mischance, their names have not been included in the election register.

The remnants of plural voting which still exist in Britain make it possible for tens of thousands of electors to vote in more than one constituency.

More than 100,000 men and women university graduates are entitled to vote for one of the twelve members of parliament representing the universities.

In addition they may vote for another candidate standing for the residential constituencies. Oxford University graduates elect two members of parliament, Cambridge two, London University one, combined English universities two, Welsh universities one, Scottish universities three, and Queen's University, Belfast, one.

Thousands of electors who are not university graduates qualify nevertheless to vote in two constituencies through their occupation of business premises of at least £10 yearly value in constituencies other than their residential constituencies.

Electors with residential, university and business qualifications, however, may vote in only two of the three constituencies.

The present register of electors was compiled last summer. Householders throughout the country filled in forms listing all persons over twenty-one years of age under their roofs who had resided there for the preceding three months. Included in these reports were the naval and military forces abroad.

Failure to make a return incurred a penalty of £100.—United Press.

BIGGEST AIRCRAFT

Contracts Given for 2,000
R. A. F. Planes

FIRMS WORK NIGHT AND DAY TO COMPLETE 1937 PROGRAMME

The Air Ministry has now given out most of the contracts for the expansion of the Royal Air Force.

It is understood that the total order, including first line machines, and training machines, totals about 2,000 aircraft.

This makes the biggest order given to the British aircraft industry since 1918.

Every aircraft and aero engine firm on the Air Ministry's list is working day and night to complete orders to time-table.

The Home Defence commands of the Royal Air Force will be brought up to a first line strength of some 1,500 to 1,600 machines by March 31, 1937.

New Pilots

This programme gives the country more than 30 new airdromes and more than 2,000 new pilots and 20,000 skilled aircraftmen.

Busy firms, such as Hawker's, have had to farm out a great deal of their work.

The airplanes on order embrace single-seater fighters which can climb to 35,000ft. in a few minutes and cruise at 230 to 250 m.p.h.; day bombers and night bombers with speeds up to 150 m.p.h.; general purpose machines and two-seater fighters; machines for coastal reconnaissance; flying boats and training machines.

Here are the bulk of the orders: Armstrong-Whitworth, of Coventry, has a substantial order for Hart Trainers. These are developed from the Hart two-seater day bomber, which flies at about 150 m.p.h.

Tests Completed

Sir John Siddeley, head of the Armstrong Siddeley Development Corporation, has stated that his companies are so busy with orders for aero engines and aircraft that Armstrong cars will only be built to order.

Vickers are also building a number of these Hart trainers. Vickers also have orders for the new general purpose monoplane, which has lately completed its tests.

The Bristol Aeroplane Co., which is busy on the production of air-cooled radial engines for military and civil purposes, has a substantial order for the Type 142 monoplane, which can reach a speed of 270 m.p.h. and something less when converted for day bombing duties.

This company now has an additional order for Audax machines. These are Army co-operation types, which again are designed by Hawkers.

The firm of A. V. Roe, of Man-

New Day Bomber

Hawkers themselves, apart from their 250 m.p.h. Fury Fighter with 600 h.p. Rolls-Royce Kestrel engine, are busy with a good order for their new "Hind," a light day bomber developed from the Hart.

The Westland firm, who build at Yeovil, have orders for the Wallace General Purpose biplane and General Aircraft at Hanworth airdrome, London, are building Fury Fighters under licence.

Boulton and Paul of Norwich and Northampton, have orders for some two-seater Fighters of the Hawker Demon, class. Both Handley Page and Fairey's, who supply the heavy night bombers for the R.A.F., are exceedingly busy.

The Gloster Aircraft Co., now allied with Hawkers, have new orders for both the Gauntlet single-seater Fighter and the Gladiator. It is the Gladiator which can reach 35,000 feet and fly at more than 230 m.p.h.

Flying Boats

New orders for flying boats have gone between Saunders-Roe, of Cowes, I.O.W., for the "London" type; Short Bros., of Rochester, for some of the Singapore class. The first of new airdromes as it stands up to date is appended.

They are:

Grainfield (Dorset)	Montrose (Scotland)
Church Fenton (Yorks)	Manby (Lincoln)
Dulben (Essex)	Odham (Hants)
Elburn (Yorks)	Sharnbury (Bucks)
Felwell (Norfolk)	Seaton (Lincoln)
Finchley (Yorks)	Sturminster (Dorset)
Harwell (Berks)	Terrill (Salop)
Hemwell (Lincoln)	Thornby Island (Glasgow)
Mullington (Wilt)	Upwood (Hants)
Marham (Norfolk)	Wyton (Hants)

The Air Ministry's plans have been laid with a view to aircraft all being completed as the airdromes and hangars are ready to receive them, and for the recruitment and training of personnel to be completed as squadrons are ready to absorb them.

A SIX YEARS' PAINTING JOB

One of the biggest painting jobs in the world has just been begun.

Forty painters are now at work on the entire girder system of Sydney's huge harbour bridge.

It is estimated, says Austral News, that they will take years to do it, by which time it is probable that they will have to begin it all over again.

Engineers have found that the rivet heads are particularly liable to wear, and a means for their better preservation is being sought.

SUN CHUAN-FANG

KILLED IN TIENSIN BY CHINESE WOMAN

Tientsin, Nov. 13.
Mow-hai Sun Chuan-fang was shot dead this afternoon by a Chinese woman at a Buddhist meeting in the Chinese city.
It is reported that the assassin whipped out a revolver and poured several shots into the body of her victim who died immediately.
The woman then quietly surrendered to the Police.
It is believed that she is related to a general who is alleged to have been executed by Sun Chuan-fang in Shanghai.
It will be recalled that Sun was military chief of Shanghai until 1927, when he was driven out by Chiang Kai-shek. He was one of the last independent war-lords to succumb to the Nationalist drive from Canton.—Reuter.
The United Press adds that Sun
Chuan-fang was shot while praying in a Buddhist temple.
His assassin's name is given as Shih Shien-chia, aged 30, and her motive is said to be revenge for her father who died fighting against Sun ten years ago.

THE UNION CHURCH

REV. J. D. MACLEAN'S
ARRIVAL DELAYED

The Kowloon Union Church are without definite information as to the ship on which their new Minister, the Rev. J. D. MacLean, accompanied by Mrs. MacLean, is travelling to the Colony.
It was at first thought they would arrive to-day by the P. and O. liner Ranchi, but a wireless message to the ship has elicited that Mr. and Mrs. MacLean are not among the passengers.
It is thought probable that they will arrive by the next P. and O.
liner, in which the Rev. Kenneth Dow, the newly appointed Minister of the Hongkong Union Church, is travelling.
The social evening arranged for to-night to welcome Mr. and Mrs.
MacLean has accordingly been postponed.

AUSTRIAN AFFAIRS

ARMAMENTS TO BE IN-CREASED IN NEAR FUTURE

Vienna, Nov. 12.
Large increases in Austria's armaments in the near future were announced by the Chancellor, Dr.
Schiessl, in a speech to the Federal Diet to-day, while General
Zehner, Under Secretary of State, emphasised the necessity of acquiring more tanks and aeroplanes.
Dr. Berger Waldenegg, the Austrian Foreign Minister, defined the fundamental basis of the Austrian foreign policy, especially as regards her fidelity to League of Nations principles, and declared that Austria had not acted to please any one country, but had acted only in the interests of her own people and trade.—Reuter.

NANKING CONGRESS

SOUTH-WEST DELEGATES
LEAVE FOR CAPITAL

Shanghai, Nov. 12.
Messrs. Chow Lu (Chancellor of the Chungshan University at Canton) Huang Chi-lu, Tong Ching-yang, Tsai Kwang-hui and Yen Chu-sze left by train for Nanking at 11 o'clock to-night to attend the Fifth Kuomintang National Congress.
They represent the South-west.
—Reuter.

Arrival in Nanking

Nanking, Nov. 13.

Mr. Chow Lu and other Canton members of the Kuomintang Central Committee arrived in Nanking this morning.
Mr. Chow was warmly welcomed at the railway station by a party of Nanking officials including Mr.
Tai Chi-tao and Mr. Mai Chiu-chun and other Kuomintang leaders.

Mr. Chow later attended the preliminary meeting of the 5th
Kuomintang Congress, held at the Central Headquarters at 9 o'clock and attended by 355 Kuomintang delegates from all parts of China.
Fifteen leaders, forming the presidium of the Congress were appointed.

Other decisions included the following.
1. Mr. Yeh Tsai-chong was appointed Secretary General of the Congress.

2. The Congress should be concluded within five days, but may be prolonged if necessary.

3. No proposals should be accepted after the third plenary meeting of the Congress.—Wah Kin Yat Po.

Reuter adds that the Congress decided that the presidium should consist of fifteen members only.

In addition nineteen members were nominated by the Central Executive Committee, and the Congress will nominate eleven more candidates. The combined list of thirty will be put to the vote and fifteen will be chosen to serve on the presidium.—Reuter.

Canton Message

Nanking, Nov. 13.
Significance is attached in Chinese circles to telegrams recently exchanged between Mr.
Hsiao Fu-chen and several elder statesmen here, the text of which was published to-day.

Mr. Hsiao's telegram was addressed to Messrs. Lin Sen, Yu
Yue-jen, Chang Ching-kiang, Tsai Yuan-pei and Chang Chi and is considered as a further sign of Canton's encouraging response to Nanking's olive branch.

The telegram declared that the South-western leaders concurred in the views on policy of the Central Government as explained by Messrs. Tai Chi-tao and Ma Chaochun, who visited Canton a week ago, expressing the conviction that the national crisis could only be solved by internal solidarity. Mr.
Hsiao said that at present emphasis must be placed on this essential principle and this augured well for the party's and the nation's revival.

A short but fitting reply has been despatched to Canton.—Reuter.

Mr. Wang Ching-wei Better
Nanking, Nov. 13.
A bulletin issued by the Central Hospital this afternoon states that Mr. Wang Ching-wei has nearly recovered from his wounds. He was allowed to sit up in bed for a time to-day—several minutes in the forenoon and again in the afternoon.—Wah Kin Yat Po.

AQUARIUM SOCIETY

MEETING ATTENDED BY MANY ENTHUSIASTS

A meeting of the newly-formed Hongkong Aquarium Society was held in the laboratory of the Biology Department, Hongkong University, last night, and over thirty interested persons, including several ladies, attended. The evening was devoted to a practical demonstration by Mr. Sulzbach of how to make a small aquarium.
The speaker showed how easy it is to commence this fascinating hobby, giving many useful hints on the proper arrangement of the earth and sand layers, the introduction of water plants, and methods of aerating and filtering the water, as well as how to maintain a fairly high temperature during the winter where tropical fish are kept.

There was a general discussion afterwards, and it was decided to have full members at a moderate subscription, entitling them to a share of fishes purchased by the Society, and associate members at approximately half the rate for full membership. The exact amount of subscription will be decided later. A number of new members were enrolled at the meeting, and the Society promises to be a success, with probably a greater membership as time goes on.

It was tentatively decided to have talks given every month; and to build up a small library of aquarist literature. At the next meeting it is hoped members will be able to bring exhibits and thus stimulate interest in the subject, even for those whose ambitions do not go beyond small portable aquaria.

CORRESPONDENCE

The Hongkong Singers

(To The Editor, Hongkong Telegraph)

Sir,—I am informed by the Cathedral authorities that the collection at our recital on Armistice night amounted to $505.50. This amount will be accounted for as follows:
Grant to Hongkong Society for the Protection of Children $200.00
Grant to St. Dunstan's £10
(say) 150.00
Ye Olde Printerie (posters and programmes) 81.50 Donation to Cathedral authorities 40.00 Sundry expenses (including honorarium to the Cathedral organist) ... 34.00 $505.50.

On behalf of the Hongkong Singers I wish to thank the Cathedral authorities and the Hongkong Union Church for facilities for rehearsals and for the service; the daily and weekly Press for their kindness in giving us such splendid publicity; Ye Olde Printerie for their expert help in the design and make up of programmes and posters, and for their generosity in the matter of charges; and, finally, the members of the vast audience for their wonderful encouragement of our efforts. The "atmosphere" was such that we as a choir were able to render the two glorious but difficult works which certainly exceeded our own estimate of what we could do!

If I may trespass still further on your space, I should like to point out to the more permanent residents in the Colony that at present over half of the Hongkong Singers are connected with the fighting services. We who are shortly leaving Hongkong would like to think that when we return for another "tour" we shall find the Singers still going strong. For this to be so, the "permanents" must come in and help in greater numbers.

We are hoping early in February next to give a rendering of Handel's Messiah (with organ and orchestra), and rehearsals of this great work have already begun.
Singers who wish to join our ranks (not just for the "Messiah" please!) should communicate with
Mr. Anderson Miller (Tel. 50283).
A. S. KING,
Chairman.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, Nov. 13.
The following reports on the New York Stock Market have been received through Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz:

The Wall Street Journal report on yesterday's markets:—The markets
today closed higher, with trading on the light side after early profit-taking.
It is a noteworthy fact that the volume was light during the period
of profit-taking and trading increased on the advance. Steel and railroad issues were the leaders in the upturn, whilst utility, oil and mercantile securities gained strength. The market for bonds was irregular and stocks on the Curb Exchange were also irregular.

S. C. & F. New York office cables;
Stocks: Securities were in renewed demand towards the close and the markets look higher.

Glidden Company's October sales were 42 per cent. over the corresponding month of last year.

Revised demand deposits, based on 101 instead of 91 in the cities amount to $13,568,000,000, down $40,000,000 from the previous week and up
$2,997,000,000 from the corresponding period of last year.

Cotton: Early sellers have apparently covered on the failure of the reaction to carry prices lower. The market is very steady. Should the current year consumption exceed that of last year, as it is expected to,
prices must apparently meet the demands for the Government held stocks.

Wheat: There is some apprehension that the Canadian reciprocal trade agreement will affect wheat,
which we consider extremely doubtful.
Foreign weakness continues, with Australia, the Argentine and Soviet Russia offering.

Corn: Aside from the steadiness of December corn on delayed movement of the crop, this market is probably without any special trend.
It is reported that 2,000,000 bushels of Argentine corn are about for this country. It is reported that there is a high moisture content in the new crop.

Rubber: General buying is better,
with a considerable amount of switching of December options instead of liquidation. The market was steady at the close.

BRITAIN POLLS

The British electorate goes to the polls to-day in an election which has been somewhat suddenly thrust upon the country. As to the outcome of the voting, the general view appears to be that the National Government will receive a new lease of life, though with a somewhat reduced majority. When the Government went into power in 1931, it secured an amazingly large majority, close on five hundred, consequent on the overthrow of the Labour Administration. Having secured no fewer than 287 seats at the 1929 election, the Labourites had their strength reduced to 52 in the last Parliament. Since then, they have won a few by-elections, but, in the main, the strength of the National Government has remained largely unimpaired. Political prophets are now forecasting a majority of between 100 and 170 for the Baldwin faction, with Labour securing as many as 230 seats. The last-named forecast may turn out to be an over-estimate, but it has to be borne in mind that the actual votes secured by the Labourites in the last General Election were far greater than the number of seats held would indicate. None the less, it will be surprising if Labour wins back anything approaching two hundred seats lost at the last election. The Government has shown considerable generalship in appealing to the country at this juncture, when all parties are at least united on the question of upholding the principles on which the League of Nations stands. There have been suggestions in Opposition circles that Mr. Baldwin and his followers, taking advantage of this fact, have exploited the international situation by deciding on an election at this time. But there is a further point to be kept in mind, namely, that the Government would naturally like a definite assurance from the electorate that its policies in the present juncture are in line with national thought. No such assurance could be given by putting the matter to the vote in the Parliament whose life has just ended, for the simple reason that the House of Commons as then constituted was elected as far back as 1931. The issue could be decided if there were machinery for holding a referendum on the question, but no such machinery exists. From some angles, it is unfortunate that the Government should put its strength to the test in the midst of a big international crisis, but it may be assumed that Mr.

*Labour Government resigned August and National Government formed by Ramsay MacDonald. General Election held October.

The thirty-seventh Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the ninth of King George V. will be brought into being at the General Election to-day.

About £2,000,000 will change hands in the process of its birth. Its annual running costs will be about £800,000.

The taxpayers will have to find some £350,000 of the cost of the General Election. This represents payments to returning officers and other costs paid by the Treasury.

The candidates will be responsible for spending, roughly, £750,000.

The remaining £900,000 will be found by the political parties from their own coffers and from generous donors who are prepared to back their political faith with cash.

These estimates are necessarily approximate. If they are borne out the election will not be unduly expensive.

THE General Election of 1931, which gave the National Government its record majority, cost in candidates' expenses £654,105, and the Treasury spent £290,000. What the political parties spent in propaganda is their secret.

Only on five occasions since the Corrupt Practices Act of the 'eighties put a control on the cascade of cash which drenched the hustings, have the expenses of the candidates and the State combined exceeded £1,000,000. The difference between the cost of those two items on the last

NOTES OF THE DAY

G.B.S. HAS HIS SAY

George Bernard Shaw would not be G.B.S. if he did not disagree with prevalent opinion. Thus in the Ethiopian controversy he takes a line of his own. He has no sentiment in the matter. He thinks that to make any part of the globe available for human habitation and social development at any higher level than that of the birds and beasts, the first material necessity is a well engineered and policed main road, with water supplies from artificial wells, and refuelling stations. Ancient Rome saw to that, likewise all the great empire-making nations. If the ferocious natives tried to hinder the road-makers, so much the worse for the natives, even to their extermination. This opening-up to civilisation has hitherto been done by unilateral action. Now it should be done by concerted action, that is, by the League of Nations. But, unfortunately, the League is not equipped for such work. Mr. Bernard Shaw is on the side of the road engineers and will not tolerate any attack on our civilisation. Rather than have that he would drop the Geneva Council down the crater of Vesuvius. He has nothing to say of the sanctity of international contracts or security against war by co-operation. But then, Mr. Bernard Shaw is never troubled by the qualms and doubts from which lesser men suffer. He sees one point, his own, and makes straight for it, ignoring all others.

Baldwin and his advisers have taken careful stock of the situation and are confident of their ability to secure a fresh vote of confidence. Nothing is sure in British elections, for which reason it would be unwise to be too precise in forecasting the probabilities. None the less, there are grounds for thinking that the National Government will once again win the day. Any other result would be little short of calamitous.

THIS mobilisation of men and money is a delicate and exacting business. Men are easier to collect than money.

Given two men of equal political ability and promise, the choice is more likely to fall on the aspirant who can pay £400 or more a year to local party funds than on the man who aims to live on his Parliamentary salary.

Yet some impecunious young men have a chance. They are given the forlorn hope seats which have to be fought for tactical reasons. It often pays a party to run a candidate without hope of success against a leader of another party so that the opponent may be tied to his own division, unable to go to the aid of a colleague in danger.

More forlorn hopes were won at the last election than at any election in the last 30 years. There is not likely to be a repetition this time.

For some trades a General Election is a harvest; for others a loss. Printers, billposters, garages, hall owners, house agents, solicitors, taxi-drivers and car hirers all benefit. Even dressmakers find their business increasing because women leaders and workers require new dresses to wear on the platforms.

The City finds that the imminence of an election creates a feeling of uncertainty. Markets become stagnant. The only consolation to the City is a gamble on the results.

Sanctions?

In 161 B.C. Julius Maccabees sent ambassadors to Rome to propose a treaty of alliance. The Senate accepted, and both sides covenanted, if either of them were attacked, not to help the aggressor with "victuals, weapons, money or ships" (1 Maccabees, viii., 19-20.)

Shot At Dawn

The Nazi Government look upon the sharp rise in the British Empire birth-rate—quintuplets in Canada, quadruplets in New Zealand, and now quadruplets in London—as a challenge, almost an act of aggression.

I am reminded of the impoverished but patriotic German couple who could not afford a perambulator. The husband, however, worked in a perambulator factory. Gradually he managed to convey to his home a sufficient number of spare parts.

One evening he settled down, in his attic, to the task of assembling a perambulator. After a few hours he emerged looking hot and exasperated. "No matter how I fit it together," he said to his wife, "the thing always turns out to be a machine-gun."

PEACE POSTER PRIZES

LADY SOUTHERN'S ELOQUENT PLEA

An eloquent plea for the spread of peace-mindedness and a graphic picture of the ugly side of war were given by Lady Southern, one of the winners of the Peace Poster Competition organised by the local branch of the League of Nations Society.

The Hon. Sir William Shenton presided and spoke of the League's activities, while Sir Robert Ho Tung thanked Lady Southern for the interest she displayed.

Amongst those present were Lady Ho Tung, the Hon. Sir Henry and Lady Pollock, the Hon. Dr. R. H. Kotewall and Mrs. Kotewall, the Hon. Dr. S. W. and Mrs. T. S. Lo, the Hon. Mr. K. and Mrs. Lo, Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Macfadyen, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. D. Forest, Mr. Tang Shu-kin, Mr. Ng Wah, Mr. M. P. Talati, Mr. S. V. Boxer (Hon. Secretary), Miss M. N. Baxter (Hon. Organising Secretary) and Dr. Y. S. Wan (Hon. Treasurer).

The hall was lined with screens bearing the numerous posters which had been entered for the competition. They were all done in colours, and bearing inscriptions and scenes indicative of the spirit of peace.

The prize-winners were: Open Section (Cup presented by Sir Robert Ho Tung) won by Mr. J. H. Maycock; 2. Miss Helen Ho; 3. (book presented by Lady Pollock) Mr. Leo K. Yuen; Highly Commended, Mr. Luk Chung-ung, Miss W. I. Griffin, Mr. C. Arnold. Youth Section (Cup presented by Sir William Shenton) won by Anthony Green (Central British School); 2. (prize presented by Lady Southern for girls) won by Annie Sufiald (French Convent); 3. (prize presented by Lady Southern for boys) won by Wong Ching-wah (St. Stephen's College); 4. Thomas Maycock (Central British School); Highly Commended, Audrey Ho (Diocesan Girls' School), Liu Ching-wah (Cathay College).

Winning Posters

Mr. J. H. Maycock's poster bore the head of a soldier whose expression was remarkable for its grimness. It was a very life-like portrait excellently done in colours with the inscription, "Remember 1914-18. Can we break faith? Was war to end war?"

Miss Helen Ho's winning exhibit showed two scenes; one a jolly harvesting under a bright sun and the other, under the same sky, a skeleton lying under a barbed wire entanglement. The title was "Peace brings plenty. War brings waste."

In the Youth Section, first award went to Anthony Green for his well-rendered likeness of the Conquistador, at the foot of which poppies showed up darkly against the white cross.

"We die for peace, not for war," was the motto of the poster, bearing the words "All within the four seas are brethren," was submitted by Miss Annie Sufiald for the second prize for girls in this section. Ships were skilfully painted in each corner, whilst the flags of the nations formed a banner across the bottom.

Wong Ching-wah fulfilled a difficult idea with extraordinary life in his poster, which showed an aeroplane soaring away from the village which it had just devastated. Two children huddled together in the foreground made a poignant contrast.

SIR WILLIAM SHENTON

Canadian Frontier As An Example for Europe

Sir William Shenton said: We have the pleasure of meeting to-day for the purpose of distributing the prizes to the successful competitors in connection with the Peace Poster Competition and Lady Southern will shortly very kindly make the distribution.

The holding of this competition arose from a decision in April last of the Council of our League of Nations Society, who came to the conclusion that the holding of such a competition would undoubtedly further the cause of peace and bring home to a large number of people in a practical form the horrors of war and all that it entails.

The literature propaganda and membership committee were asked to carry out the project and the substantial success which has been achieved is largely due to the activities of Miss Bax, Miss Bacombe and Miss Griffin, who have also been ably assisted by Mr. George She and Mr. Thomas Tam (Applause). Exhibits have come from as far away as Singapore and Kwantung.

To-day we appear to be back again to the year 1914. Two independent nations, both members of the League of Nations, are in the throes of a terrible war. One has been declared the aggressor. Every means of slaughter which human ingenuity can invent is being used. Article XVI of the Covenant is about to be brought into force; the support sanctions will be given to the aggressor, and the result is still a matter of uncertainty. This, however, is certain, that the result of the war can only bring pain, sorrow and economic ruin to the combatants.

Love of Concord. All attempts to substitute reason for force—arbitration for war—in the adjustment of international controversies must depend upon an enlightened public opinion. Men must be imbued with the love of concord. To accomplish this the virile virtues of peace must be taught in the pulpits, on the platform, in the schools and universities, through diplomacy and the Press. The heroism of moderation and self-control must be dwelt upon as we have been accustomed to dwell upon the glories of war. The suggestion must be ridiculed—that without periodical strife men become weak and ineffectual and produce an impoverished civilization. The dynamic qualities of peace must be emphasized.

It must be shown that in order to win the victories of peace, men must be as resolute and aggressive and courageous as they have hitherto been in gaining military distinction. Does it require less courage, a smaller degree of initiative, and a feebler imagination to carry on the world's undertaking in commerce and industry, in social betterment and in the highest pursuit of statesmanship, than are required to fight destructive battles and to win costly victories?

Seeing the Romance

We hear a great deal of the romance of war, but is there not also a romance of peace? The romance of happy homes, smiling faces and joyous lives of fruitful deeds and populous cities; the romance of a strong people, conscious of their strength, but intent on practising all the amenities of life as they strive to excel in science and literature and the arts. The highest manifestation of power is for a nation which has the strength to refuse to exercise it in passion and violence; realising that there is greater virtue in restraint than in excess. Wars have certainly not been fought through the centuries to perpetuate war, but to secure enduring peace.

Nothing that has been said should be construed as a condemnation of all past wars, some of which have been necessary and just; or in derogation of many of the world's greatest military leaders, who have exhibited so splendidly qualities of generosity and magnanimity, of sacrifice and chivalry and courage. The very training of the soldier, in as much as he is taught the value of discipline, the need of obedience, the disgrace of cowardice, the sense of responsibility, and the significance of country, is the training which is demanded in times of peace, and it can be secured by a faithful discharge of all the obligations of citizenship as fully as in the practice of war. Armies and navies will doubtless always be maintained; but it is hoped that they will gradually grow smaller and become less burdensome as the love of peace becomes the dominating passion in the lives of men.

Progress of Illusion

No one abhors war more than the man who has been impelled to follow it from sense of patriotic duty. If, after long centuries of strife and bloodshed, we have not hit upon a better way of settling international disputes than through the argument of numbers and guns and ships, we have better frankly confess that civilization is a failure and that the intellectual and moral progress of which we boast is simply an illusion. We believe, however, that the world is growing better and wiser, more gentle and more just. We feel now, in the words of Browning, that "we may come to know the meaning of the music of accord."

Between the British Empire as represented by the Dominion of Canada, and the great republic of America, stretches a frontier of nearly 4,000 miles the longest frontier separating any two nations in the world. Throughout its whole length this great frontier is unfortified. No armed men are stationed to guard it; no forts have been built to protect it; no fleets float on the vast lakes—great inland seas—which form part of the boundary. A few small islands are scattered in the lakes, not as the symbols of armed force, but only intended to prevent smuggling. There is a Treaty with a Board to settle boundary disputes and it has worked most satisfactorily for many years.

Lady Southern Thanked

Imagine the condition of Europe to-day if the frontiers which separate its various countries, now a mass of menacing fortifications and armaments of armed men, were as unprotected as the far-stretching frontier, extending from the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific, which separates Canada from the United States. We should have a state of things which would transform Europe, lift from the peoples the crushing burden of armaments and bring us nearer an era of international peace.

With an example such as this before the world surely sane reason will get the upper hand. In conclusion it gives me the greatest pleasure to propose a very hearty vote of thanks to Lady Southern for so kindly coming here to-day and distributing the prizes, also for the kind interest she has taken in the competition; and we are also indebted to her for the gift of two of the prizes. (Applause). Sir Robert Ho Tung is also going to speak in eulogy of Lady Southern.

Other Helpers

We are greatly indebted to the Cathedral Chaplain for the loan of the Cathedral hall. We are grateful to the judges for adjudicating on the posters and we are grateful to Miss Bax, Miss Bacombe, Miss Griffin, Mr. She and Mr. Tam for organising the details of this competition. We are indebted to the Press, both European and Chinese, for the publicity they have given us; and particularly to the Hongkong Telegraph for the loan of screens and other fixtures. We wish to thank the donors of the various prizes, and in particular Sir Robert Ho Tung, for the beautiful cup he has presented. We are most appreciative of the kindness of the Cathedral Balminton Club for having waived their right to the Cathedral hall to-day in our favour. We tender our thanks to Messrs. Lane Crawford, Limited, for receiving the entries, for displaying the prizes and for their assistance in the organising of the competition. (Applause).

LADY SOUTHERN

Rejects Nonsensical Theory That War is Inevitable

Lady Southern presented the prizes and congratulated the recipients on their zeal and skill. She said: Mr. She in his very kindly invitation to distribute the prizes to-day asked me to make a rousing speech on Peace. I wish I could. I feel so deeply about Peace that it is difficult to speak about it. Heavens! Sir William Shenton has covered the ground so thoroughly that I feel my remarks are superfluous. But I will not tax your patience long.

Personally, like tens of thousands of others who know what the Great War meant—the very word "war" conjures up a vision of absolute misery and despair—a time when it had not been for work to do and the hope that the sacrifice and the sorrow and the hideous waste of human life would lead to a world without war it would have been impossible to keep sane for four long years. Sad has been the disillusionment. Over twenty years have passed since the War began, and we find depression, mistrust and actual warfare rampant to-day. The League of Nations is struggling gallantly to bring about a settlement of world affairs, and its efforts are perhaps a ray of light in the darkness.

Out of the Ashes

But out of the ashes of the War have arisen tyrannies which set back the clock of civilisation more surely than any other influence. Men are not allowed to think for themselves; they are told to go to war and they go to war, they are told to hate and they hate. I read a paragraph written by James Agate the other day which said:—"Broadly speaking both men and women base their lives in relation to the lives of other men and women upon reason. But nations are different; their conduct relative to one another is based upon unreason, as August 1914 generously proved."

The ordinary man and his wife, and it is of these that the greater portion of the world's population is composed, do not want war, just as they are not keen on running their heads against a brick wall, because they know it will hurt. But they are dragged into war, ruined by war, through the conflicting interests of their own and other countries. So the one thing to concentrate upon, the one thing that may bring peace to the world, is to make men and women and children peace-minded. You are urged to become air-minded, but it is far more necessary to be peace-minded with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your might.

War Not Inevitable

While the wealth of the world is being poured out in armaments and some of the best brains of the world are concentrating on dealing out death in horrible forms, science waits ready to teach us how to live in comfort and health; and it is up to us to show him how to live in beauty. People will tell you blandly and stupidly that there must be war, for there has always been war. You might as well say that people must always be swept away by small-pox, that malaria is inevitable, that influenza is unavoidable. To the dustbin with such nonsense! During the last fifty years the average life of man has been prolonged through sanitation and the knowledge of preventive medicine and modern surgery. For what object do we preserve these lives? To slay them by all the diabolical means? To say that war must always exist is about as sensible as saying that men burnt each other at the stake to prove the gentleness of teaching of Christ, and consequently we must continue to burn those whose opinions do not accord with ours.

There are still a number of people determined to look forward and not back. Can we not concentrate all the common sense of the world on this business of ending war? For what object do we preserve these lives? To slay them by all the diabolical means? To say that war must always exist is about as sensible as saying that men burnt each other at the stake to prove the gentleness of teaching of Christ, and consequently we must continue to burn those whose opinions do not accord with ours.

Perfect Harmony

No one has put the case more forcibly than that wonderful man, Dick Sheppard "When youth is again being taught the glory of war, it is well to remind ourselves that in reality war is a purely devilish, bestial affair, having nothing whatever to do with patriotism save for the hardness of men's hearts. We cannot any more think of war except as a damnable arrest of development and decency."

We ourselves have no quarrel with the citizens of other countries. Cannot the citizens of the world, ordinary men and women, combine in such numbers, in such strength, in such friendship, that they will insist on no more of this wholesale murder, but by sacrifice and co-operation develop together and prosper together? By the constant dropping of water on a stone the hardest rock is hollowed, by the constant demand for peace, the policies of the world may be changed if not in our day then in the years to come.

Then shall be achieved what Dr. Alfred Whitehead aptly describes as "The Harmony of Harmonies which calms destructive turbulence and completes civilisation. Thus a society is to be termed civilised whose members participate in the five qualities: Truth, Beauty, Adventure, Art and Peace." (Applause).

SIR ROBERT HO TUNG

"A Desire for Peace is Not Enough"

In proposing a vote of thanks to Lady Southern, Sir Robert Ho Tung said: Lady Southern, My Lord Bishop, Sir William Shenton, Ladies and Gentlemen—I count it both a privilege and an honour to be asked to attend this Peace Poster Exhibition and Prize-Giving. We are meeting to-day under the shadow of war or threat of war in one part of the world or another. You may therefore be tempted to wonder why an inopportune moment such as this should be chosen to sing the virtue of "peace on earth, goodwill towards

MEMBER OF WELL KNOWN MALAYAN FAMILY

News has been received in the Colony of the death, on October 17, in Ellwood, Indiana, U.S.A. of Sister Marie Louise Cornelius, of the Order of St. Maur, at the great age of 88.

A member of an old and respected Malayan family, the deceased lady joined the order at the age of 17, and was for many years at Yokohama, where she was very well known among the foreign community. An able organiser and a great personality she was largely responsible for the raising of funds for the building occupied by the Order prior to the Great Earthquake of 1923. Later she went to the United States, where she continued active work on behalf of her Order, becoming personally acquainted with the late President Taft, and many other leading citizens.

Sister Marie Louise is survived by a sister, Sister Josephine of the Penang Convent of the Order of St. Maur.

Among Sister Marie Louise's many nephews and nieces are Dr. E. L. de Sousa of Hongkong and the Rev. Fr. Ashness of the Maryknoll Mission, Kongmoon, Mr. L. P. de Sousa, M.C., of the Rural Board of Singapore, Mr. H. M. de Sousa of Malacca, The Rev. Brother Justinian and Sister St. Winifred of Ipoh and Messrs. P. M. de Sousa and T. de Sousa, of the Singapore branch of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation.

Sister Louise was buried in the St. Joseph's cemetery, Ellwood, following High Mass in the Convent chapel sung by the children of the Convent, by whom she was greatly beloved.

men." But a moment's reflection will, I hope, convince you that the moment when the peace of the world is disturbed, is the time when peace-lovers everywhere should band themselves together solidly for the maintenance of international peace and security. It was a consideration such as this which led me gladly to accept the kind invitation of the League of Nations Society to come here this afternoon. A similar reflection must have been present in Lady Southern's mind when she consented to grace to-day's proceedings with her presence. Lady Southern's abiding interest in the cause of peace is as well known as her interest in the Girl Guide Movement which contributes so effectively to international union and concord. (Applause). In fact if we analyse the long list of public activities with which she has been connected, we identify them all readily as that, underlying them all, pervades a profound desire to better the relationship between man and man.

Sense of Responsibility

Ladies and gentlemen, without this desire—a desire which knows no caste, creed or colour—no one can successfully work for the cause of world peace. Imbued with the finest spirit of the humanist, deepened by a poet's sensitiveness to all that is beautiful, good and true, Lady Southern's sojourn with us in Hongkong has appreciably deepened the sense of social responsibility among all sections of the community. I heartily endorse the expression of appreciation which my friend Sir William Shenton has just made to Lady Southern for her presence here to-day. I have always wondered how Lady Southern finds the time to do so much good. I have often wanted to know what is the secret of her vitality, which enables her to identify herself so sympathetically and so completely with practically every deserving cause in Hongkong. (Applause). I hope Lady Southern will tell us.

Work for Peace

Ladies and gentlemen, the problem of war and peace has interested me for many years and I have become convinced that the desire for peace is not enough. We must organise and work for peace. This Poster Exhibition of yours is an activity in the right direction. It is the first effort of its kind in the Colony, perhaps in the whole Far East, and I earnestly hope that this is but the beginning of many efforts to organise peace on a sure and certain foundation. This Exhibition deserves to be repeated and I heartily congratulate all who entered for the Competition as well as those who have succeeded in it. The organisers, too, merit not only our praise but our thanks. With men and women so keenly dedicated to the cause of peace, we can look optimistically to the future when war will be ousted from the world as the plague has been ousted from the family, the tribe, the clan, the province and the nation. I hope, therefore, that this Exhibition will greatly strengthen our faith in that charter of international peace and collective security which we call the Covenant of the League of Nations. (Applause).

Mr. Boxer said he hoped that the enthusiasm which had evidenced itself over this competition would be maintained in an increase in membership of the League of Nations Society. They hoped shortly to form a study group which would take as its first subject a study of the League, of Nations Covenant.

Mr. Edwards proposed from the audience that the exhibits would form a useful propaganda if they were photographed all together, and the Chairman said the idea would be considered.

The meeting was then adjourned and those present inspected the exhibits.

HOW LEACH FOOLED THE PRESS

DEMON BOWLER JOKE

(By "Veritas").

Donald Leach's little joke on the local Press when, in an interview upon the arrival of the Shanghai Interport team, he gave a vivid description of the demon fast bowling of E.M.P. Williams, is now well-known history.

But yesterday, during the fifth adjournment at the K.C.C., I heard an amplification of the joke. As it came from a Shanghai player, I am not vouching for its veracity. You can fool some of the Press all the time, etc., etc., etc.

However the yarn goes that when Shanghai turned out for their first practice last Thursday it was arranged to prove to our eagle-eyed Pressmen how devastatingly fast was Mr. Williams.

Williams was to all intents and purposes given the ball, but actually Kermani retained it. Stokes, I am told, was batting, and Williams went back some 25 yards for his run while Kermani, dropped back somewhere near the Supreme Court boundary.

Up pounced Williams to the wicket, brought over his arm with a magnificent action. Stokes made a wild slash and the next moment Kermani was throwing back the ball, which he had held all the time. "Mon Dieu!" observed the startled scribes, and hurried back to their offices to write about the bowler whose deliveries couldn't be seen once the ball had left the hand.

Happily I was on a ship in the China Sea when this happened.

THE NEW L.B.W. RULE

Eagerly Accepted By New Zealand

(By Geoffrey Simpson)

London, Oct. 24. Having predicted that the experimental l.b.w. rule would become universal, I ought not to be surprised at yesterday's development—an invitation to New Zealand to make the change.

But the M.C.C. certainly do move fast once they reach a decision. "Scarcely had Australia been requested to come into line than a similar cable from Lord's was on the way to the New Zealand Cricket Council.

And the New Zealanders, without even resorting to a ballot, gave the new rule a welcome and will put it in force for all the games to be played in their country by E.R.T. Holmes's team.

All of which bears out what The Daily Mail has been saying since last summer—that the l.b.w. change is going to become permanent.

SECRETIVE
If there is any complaint to be made, it is that the M.C.C. have been too secretive in their negotiations. England, after all, is the home of cricket, and you would think we would get official information of what is going on.

Yet the first news of the M.C.C.'s invitation to Australia reached London from Sydney, while information that New Zealand had also been approached comes from Wellington.

It was just the same, if you remember, over the leg-theory business. News of the M.C.C.'s activities in London usually reached English cricket followers via Australia.

SCOTLAND WINS

INTERNATIONAL SOCCER GAME

FAST ENCOUNTER

Edinburgh, Nov. 13. Scotland to-day beat Ireland by two goals to one in the International Football Competition.

The teams turned out as selected and 28,000 spectators saw the game open under ideal conditions, the weather being fine and without any wind to bother the players.

The first half was goalless and very even. But after the interval, Dumbrieck, the Chelsea centre-forward sent in a hard shot which Jackson (Chelsea) the Scottish goalkeeper could only push away to Kelly. The Derby County left winger fastened on the ball and netted with a left drive.

GLORIOUS SHOT

Play continued at a great pace and amid great excitement Scotland forced two corners, from one of which Walker hit the cross-bar with a smashing shot.

Scotland pressed continuously and Scott saved several stinging shots before Duncan scored the winning goal a minute from the close.

The teams were: Jackson (Chelsea), Anderson (Hearts), Cummings (Partick), Macleod (Hearts), Simpson (Glasgow Rangers), Hastings (Sunderland), Delaney (Celtic), Walker (Hearts), Armstrong and Mills (Aberdeen), Duncan (Derby).

Ireland—Scott (Belfast Celtic); Cook (Exeter), Fulton (Hull), Celtic; McCullough (Manchester City); Jones (Lancashire), Mitchell (Chelsea); Duggan (Leeds), Stevenson (Exeter), Dumbrieck (Chelsea), Doherty (Blackpool), Kelly (Derby City).—Reuter.

Cricketers' Brighter Billiards

(By FRANK FOXON)

London, Oct. 24. From the Oval to Burroughes and Watts—who are celebrating their centenary this week in 30th Square.

The Governor, Percy Fendall and Alf Gover, of Surrey County Cricket. The Governor, Jack Hobbs, and the billiards match yesterday. It was the most entertaining one I ever saw.

When Gover, who is not a very good batsman, made a break of ten Jack Hobbs said: "Double figures and the first time for two years."

"I'm playing billiards, not cricket," retorted Gover reverently.

POTTING THE WHITE

At the slightest opportunity the white was potted. "A gentleman's game?" said Hobbs.

"No," said Gover. "Gover won the match, but I do not think the scores matter much. It was just good fun."

443 RUNS IN 315 MINS.

Kermani Again: Scores A Hard-Hitting Century

LEACH HINTS 2-DAY MATCH IN FUTURE

(By "Veritas").

BATSMEN were in a tearing hurry at the K.C.C. yesterday where, fresh from their narrow Interport defeat, the Shanghai team were entertained by the Kowloon Cricket Club in a whole day match.

FIVE and a quarter hours of actual play produced 443 runs. Of these Shanghai scored 270 in 200 minutes.

JUST as well the K.C.C. is not a built-up arena!

IT was happy-go-lucky cricket Kermani, hitting everything which remotely resembled a bad length ball, collected 115 in 140 minutes.

YET at tiffin Kermani complained that he was not seeing the ball properly!

AS a matter of fact it was noticeable that he was inclined to play outside Burnett's deliveries, but with the exception of a hard chance to Hung when he was in the twenties, Kermani never looked like getting out. It was in every respect, a very fine innings, and earned for him the bat presented by Mr. Justice Lindsell for the best batting performance of the day.

LECKIE also showed something of the form which gave him a place in the Interport side. His 40 resulted from a mixture of aggressive and dignified strokes, in both cases the ball being played right in the middle of the bat.

JENKINS gave us a new impression. He batted extremely well. He like fury to help Kermani carry the score from 144 to 233, and had an individual contribution of 27. He reaped a rich harvest from Frank Goodwin, until that astute bowler pierced his defence with a lovely ball.

KOWLOON'S bowling was not of the best. Goodwin, showing no signs of the injury which kept him out of cricket last year, bowled as well as anybody, but was not consistent. Far too many full tosses on the leg stump. Still 4 for 67 after Shanghai had declared at 270 for 4 were not bad figures.

A part from Ernie Fincher's work at cover, and Hung's snappy catch at first slip to dispose of Elliott, the fielding left a lot to be desired. Lots of singles were turned into boundaries because the fielders did not get down to the ball.

St. Andrew's are introducing a new lady player into their mixed doubles team for the first badminton league match of the season to-morrow. She is Mrs. Dawson, who, I am told, is a hard hitter and boasts a strong all-round game. She is playing with Mr. Fincher, the captain of the club.

Miss Florence Wong and Miss Molly Chiu, both members of the team last year are included, the former partnering Betty Guest and the latter Henry Kew.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. H. Shute are again No. 1 pair for the Fire Brigade, in which team to meet Palkoon Miss Madge Griffiths makes her debut. She is being partnered by W. N. Smith.

The third pair will be Fisher (a greatly improved player) and Mrs. Wild.

POSSIBLE PROBLEM
Later on the Brigade may be confronted with a little problem concerning the composition of the mixed doubles team. This morning

ARTHUR Lay, having, I think, his first serious innings of the season, batted in best style for 71. There was no reason for him getting out. He played a positive "cow" shot to Jenkins and paid the penalty.

THE score-book showed that his most productive hits yielded one five and ten 4's. Perhaps Leach was rather kind. He opened with "Larwood" Williams (Nearly got a Blue they tell me, but not for bowling!) and Baker. This enabled Lay to get his eye in. And as the reason for my earlier observation that it was his own fault he got out.

NORMAN Mackay batted with the utmost confidence and with Lay put on 71 for the first wicket. Then he directed a hard pull towards Leckie standing on the square-leg boundary, and that was that. By the way those 71 runs were scored in 36 minutes. The telegraph-board became an animated object.

BEYOND Lay and Mackay only Burnett was capable of dealing with the Shanghai attack, which was subsequently tightened up, Leach bringing on himself, Pat Madar, Jenkins and Elliott.

I THOUGHT Burnett's knock was delightful. It contained four very hard hit boundaries and his 32 runs were made in 26 minutes. It wasn't classical batting, but it was sincere and whole-hearted and proved that even Jenkins and Leach could be knocked about.

BY way of interest it should be noted that Leach used nine bowlers. Five of them didn't get a wicket and bowled only 13 overs between them.

IT was to be expected that Pat Madar would do most damage. His five wickets cost 43 runs. Leckie came along with two for seven and Jenkins had a couple for 16.

JENKINS sent down a queer assortment. So many on the leg side. He was lucky not to have had 40 runs scored from such stuff. But the batsmen timed him well. Three times in succession Hung clean missed with big pulls.

THE innings terminated on a bright note. Stokes disposed of Goodwin with a wonderful catch at leg, taking the ball on the run only a few inches from the ground. Then Booth, caught Starling Jex while running towards the boundary.

Miss Elaine Brookes.

Daughter Of Famous Tennis Player To Wed

MISS E. BROOKES

A London lawn tennis romance is soon to have its sequel in a wedding at Melbourne Cathedral. On November 9 Mr. R. F. Bessemer Clark, who is a member of the Melbury Club, Kensington, sailed for Australia to marry on January 7 Miss Elaine Brookes, second daughter of Mr. Norman Brookes, in his day the world's greatest lawn tennis player.

Miss Brookes played and watched a lot of lawn tennis during a European tour with her father this year, and it was then that she met Mr. Bessemer Clark in London.

PLAYED IN DOUBLES
"We were introduced at the Melbury Club," he told me to-day. "We met afterwards at Wimbledon and played together in the mixed doubles at Lady Crossfield's tennis garden party."

"I believe our wedding will be attended by many tennis friends; possibly F. J. Perry, who when in Australia visits Mr. Brookes, will be there."

VISITED HONGKONG
Miss Elaine Brookes was a visitor to Hongkong last year when she accompanied her father who was on a tour of the Orient extending invitations to leading athletes and tennis players to take part in the Melbourne Centenary celebrations.

During her brief stay here Miss Brookes played tennis in a garden party at Government House, while Mr. Brookes spent his time on the local golf courses.

dary and with the ball coming over his head. Typical examples of the difference between the good club cricketer and the Interporter.

AFTER the game there was the customary ceremony of presenting the flag. Mr. Justice R.E. Lindsell, President of the K.C.C. called upon Frank Goodwin to give the flag to Leach.

IN response the Shanghai captain hinted that when they came down next time they would enjoy a two-day match with the K.C.C., and expressed the hope that this

COUNTRY CLUB CRICKET

ONLY ON A BETTER WICKET: HAPPY MATCH AT THE K.C.C.

R. ABBIT ADMIRES INTERPORTERS—AND THE ACCOMMODATION

(By R. Abbit)

What I like about this regular fixture between the Shanghai side and the K.C.C. is the delightful holiday feeling that prevails. It has a spice of good old country cricket though the K.C.C. wicket is very much better than rural ones in England. There is none of the stern earnestness of the Interport.

It was very pleasant to visit the K.C.C. and find a chair and a table ready for me in my old corner under the trees far from the chatter of the crowd and the temptations of the Bar!

The game did not start until nearly eleven and Shanghai batted first. E.M.P. Williams and J. H. B. Leckie opening Humphreys, by the way, stood down and E. C. Baker played. Burnett bowled from the Bowling Green end and Goodwin at the other. Both batsmen seemed comfortable.

Williams got inside Burnett's swinging half volley and Frank Goodwin held him in the slips. Leckie continued to bat very nicely, but at 37 Baker, who had only got five, was bowled by a beauty from Goodwin, which I think came in a lot.

Kermani came in and runs came quick. He kept getting Burnett away to mid-wicket and I think the gap could, and should have been filled.

At 50, Willie Hung relieved Goodwin but his first over was all over the place and Leckie glanced two and on-drove one beautifully—all the strokes reaching the boundary speedily. Hung was trying to bowl too fast and next over he sent down a wide.

At 70 Robert Lee relieved Burnett. Just before 90 went up both batsmen had lucky snicks, Leckie through the slips off Hung and Kermani between his legs and the wicket off Lee.

THE STAND BROKEN
With 90 on the board Smith relieved Hung and had Leckie bowled his first delivery. 95-3-40. It was a very bright and breezy knock. Stokes joined Kermani who had become rather quiet. Lee bowled very steadily and fielded excellently to his own bowling, stopping some quick returns.

The hundred was hoisted after about an hour's play. Just after Smith had a bad over and Kermani had a couple of nice fours to leg presented to him. Goodwin relieved him and bowled an excellent maiden to Stokes who was not batting in this as he had been done out in the Interport. Ernie Fincher threw the wicket down beautifully from cover and Kermani was only just in.

At 144 Stokes brought his stroke right round when hitting Goodwin and broke his wicket. 144-1-20. Later Kermani hit the same bowler twice running for six to square leg but the ball has only to carry the cinder track it is not such a big hit. Runs continued pretty quickly until tiffin was taken. 220 runs were up. Kermani being not out 86, and Jenkins 23. The latter had played nice free cricket.

AFTER Tiffin
Jenkins hit Goodwin's first ball to square leg for four and played out the over. Burnett bowled at the other end. In Goodwin's second over he bowled Jenkins with a good "un. 233-5-27. Leach started bustling from the start but he was well caught by Hung at first slip off Lee after he had scored 6. 234-6-6.

The order was changed and Elliott came in, but in Goodwin's next over he skied the ball over his head to be caught by Hung running across from slip-239-7-5.

Harry Madar came next, and in the next over Kermani completed his century amid much applause. Runs came freely now and Kermani hit six and four of consecutive balls from Goodwin. The innings was declared closed at 271 for seven, Kermani 115 not out. A very fine innings.

K. C. C. BAT
Kowloon started at 2.55 p.m. and Williams bowled the first over. Lay had a four to leg and a three to third man, while Mackay had a four to leg and a single. Baker bowled at the other end. Thirty went up after four overs.

Stokes went on for Williams at the Pavilion end, and Elliott at the other. Williams relieved Kermani behind the stumps. Runs flowed a bit but then Lay drove Elliott for four and next ball had a five all run at long on. Both batsmen were playing most confidently.

Pat Madar relieved Stokes with the score at 60, but Lay played him confidently. So did Mackay but he finally hit a full-on to Jenkins on the square leg boundary. 71-1-26.

E. F. Fincher then came in and Lay then completed his fifty with a strong off drive. Booth then went on for Elliott—much to my surprise—as he had a badly damaged first finger joint in his bowling hand. He clearly was bowling under difficulties. He bowled one over and then Donald Leach relieved him, and clean bowled Ernie Fincher with his second ball. 92-2-6. Tea was then taken.

Leach and Madar bowled after tea and Lay hit the latter to mid wicket and Lay hit the latter to mid wicket.

Football Prominent In Olympic Games

GERMANY'S PLANS

As a game that will draw the crowds and contribute generously to the enormous organising costs, it is only natural that football should figure prominently in the next Olympic Games.

Germany, the country responsible for the 1936 Olympiad, is terribly anxious for a strong entry for the football tournament.

To secure this she has appointed as one of the chief organisers our refereeing friend, Dr. P. J. Bauwens, one of the most-travelled men in Europe and one of the game's leading ambassadors.

And, scarcely does he complete the details than France says she will not enter for the Soccer at any price.

OUTSPOKEN

Germany is one country where football is genuinely amateur, but that does not stop the French from saying what they think.

And without waiting until June, the closing date for entries, France has withdrawn already, declaring that half the amateurs in the football games will be disguised professionals.

England found that out long ago, which is why this country has stood out of all the post-war Olympic football competitions.

STILL IN DOUBT

It is said that "broken time," which means the repayment to players of money lost in wages, will not be permitted.

The Germans will observe this condition to the letter, but that does not remove the doubts about some others who will compete.

The situation is a delicate one. I should like to see the England jersey on the Olympic field. We have over a million registered amateur players, to say nothing of the millions who are unregistered.

A country which is such a power in the game is entitled more than any other to take its place in an Olympic tournament.

But unless everything is going to be above board it would be better for us to keep out.

QUEER PSYCHOLOGY OF FOOTBALLERS

BIRKETT OF MIDDLESBOROUGH AN INTERESTING EXAMPLE

(By F. M. Carruthers)

The footballer is a peculiarly fitting subject for the psycho-analyst. He would find many perplexing problems in the dressing-room.

Why should a player or even a team of proved ability suddenly and without apparent reason decline? At once Aston Villa in their present disturbing position come to mind.

Some day we may have specially appointed officials to study the mental reactions of the men to the game.

Soon after Mr. John Cochrane came from Scotland to manage the Sunderland club he decided that success in English football was made up of 75 per cent. of confidence and enthusiasm. The remainder he was planned to attribute to skill.

A MENTAL OPERATION

There is no doubt that so far as the trained professional is concerned, the game to-day is more a mental than a physical operation.

Mr. Herbert Chapman was a psychologist. He spent much of his time in trying to find out the thoughts of everyone—his players, and rival officials. "I want to know what they are thinking about," he used to say.

He knew all about the private lives of his players, not through idle curiosity, but in order that he might understand them and help them to their own success as well as his own as a manager. It was through the knowledge he acquired that he was able to inspire them and increase their value 50 per cent.

CASE OF BIRKETT

One of the most interesting psychological studies at the present time is Birkett, the young Middlesbrough outside right, who played for England against Ireland.

As a member of the Arsenal team his future seemed unpromising. I feared in fact that he might join that big band of players who miss the chance and eke out a living in undistinguished company.

Then came his transfer and freedom from the domination of all the stars at Highbury. The transfer and the Bastians had overwhelmed him and given him a sense of inferiority, and I can imagine him sitting in the train on the way to his new club and saying to himself: "I'm as good as they are at Middlesbrough. I'll show them."

Probably without realising the mental relief which his transfer gave him Birkett became a new man and a confident footballer with a belief in himself.

This is the chance which has taken place, and it has been so tremendous that it has lifted him from a position of obscurity into an English international in two or three months.

Club Eleven Beat Destroyers

The Hongkong Hockey Club 1st eleven defeated the 8th Destroyer Flotilla by two goals to nil in a hockey match played at King's Park yesterday.

The game was fast, and although the sailors put up a keen struggle, and it was not until the second half that the Club were able to score.

In the first half the Club came very near to scoring on several occasions but the sailors put up a steady defence.

After the interval, the Club scored twice through G. E. R. Dwyer.

Recreio v. H.K.S.R.A. On the Marina ground, the Club de Recreio drew with the second battery of the Hongkong and Singapore Brigade, R.A. each team scoring twice.

The Recreio were one man short, but despite this they put up a creditable performance. The game being fast and even. The Gunners were the first to open the scoring after about ten minutes' play, but shortly afterwards, the Portuguese equalised through A. S. Xavier. The interval arrived with the score at one-all.

for four. Hung was batting at the other end, and Jenkins then came on for Madar and had Hung caught at the wicket after a two had been scored 104-3-5. R. Lee succeeded. But things were now going wrong for the K.C.C. and at 111 Jenkins bowled Arthur Lay with a beauty. He had played a fine forcing innings of 71.

Burnett had three through the slips and then cracked Leach to long-off for four and repeated it to long on. He was pretty rough with him next over too, and also hit Jenkins very hard. 150 went up and Pat Madar relieved Leach, and got Lee caught at backward point by Stokes, 131-5-5.

Runs still came freely until Jenkins caught Burnett at long off from one of Pat Madar's deliveries, 154-6-32. A fine slogging innings.

Gittins came in and hit his first ball to extra for four. Leach was on at the Pavilion end and had Munn caught in the slips 164-7-9.

Goodwin smote the ball hard but it usually went to hand, and then he was magnificently caught by Stokes at long leg off Leach. The catch was taken six inches above the ground as the fieldsmen was running across. 172-8-5. Smith was caught at the wicket for a duck at the same total, and Jex fell three balls later, very well taken at cover.

SERIAL STORY

DONNA THE BIG TOP by BEULAH DOWLING

CHAPTER XXVIII

In his first anger over Con's callousness and the shock of Madeline's death Renfro had meant what he said, when he dismissed the animal trainer. Soon, however, showmanship dominated sentiment and after three performances without Con's animal act Renfro had reason to repent his hasty action. He therefore sent word for Con to return.

Renfro made a round of the hotels but could find no trace of the performer. When the circus left New Orleans, therefore, it departed minus several lions, tigers and their trainer. A period of rainy weather set in. Everyone in the troupe was discontent and ridden with the superstition that bad luck was haunting the show. Since expiring up all profit and there were only a few more dates to be played before closing for the winter, Renfro posted a notice that these engagements had been cancelled. Hence the circus did not reach Montgomery and Con failed to receive the letter Donna sent there.

The midlets took a train directly to New York where they joined a large vaudeville act made up of tiny folks like themselves, playing the circuit of the eastern cities. Later they would embark for Germany, to that section of Bavaria where so many of their kind first saw the light of day.

Two of the clowns who worked in the clothing business during the summer months went farther west. The men and women looked for the rodeo hurried on to their other show, but the majority of the troupe travelled to Chicago.

Though Con had managed to elude Renfro, he was still in New Orleans. He had become a victim of remorse, finding (now that she was dead) that he had really cured for the girl who had given him her whole-hearted devotion. His ambition to become a star in "big time" had been destroyed with the death of the Bengal tigress, and he was in a humbled, sudden condition, refusing to take stock either of the present or the future.

He had checked out of the hotel where he and Madeline had stayed because the walls seemed to echo his dead wife's voice and he could see her in the shadows and in every hallway. Always she looked as she had that last night—white-faced and terrified, about to enter the cage with the tigress. Over and over again Con could hear Renfro's accusation, "You killed her!"

He knew that it was true. It had been nothing more than a desire to punish Madeline for her past folly that had impelled him to force her to go through with Lucy. Madeline had not been ready to do that. She would never have been ready, for only his presence in the cage beside her had given her courage and confidence. Con knew all that now.

Moving away from the hotel, he soon found, however, that his memories that haunted him. He thought of Madeline as she had been on the motor trip to New Orleans, laughing and gay. She had said, "If we could only go on like this forever!" and he had answered heartily, "There had been other times like that, and remorse for it overwhelmed him, how that it was too late. Madeline had been loyal. He knew how she had been during those dark days of entering the lions' cage. Yet she had gone through with it. She had done it because Con asked her to. Yes, Madeline had loved him.

Temperamental, with but little sentiment in his nature, he was still not quite so hard-hearted or callous of feelings as he had appeared. Consequently he had never been a dispirited man, a small amount of liquor intoxicated him. He found that by drinking he could forget and from the time he settled into a boarding house that had once been a stately mansion until he left the city he did not draw a completely sober breath.

The little Creole woman who owned the boarding house and called her establishment "a den of the devil" pitied him from the depths of her sentimental heart. She made overtures of friendliness which Con ignored and she murmured often, "Such a pity! He's going to the dogs and who can blame him? So young to lose his wife that way! They were little more than bride and groom."

There were days on end when Con did not appear in the shabby, genteel dining room, when he ate what food he wanted from "hot dog" wagons or munched tamales that he bought on the streets when hungry.

There were nights when, bleary-eyed and uncertain in his walk, he staggered along the river bank until, overcome by exhaustion, he would fling himself upon the levee and sleep there until daylight awakened him.

Once so immaculate in his appearance, so clean shaven and handsome, Con looked now like a peach comb. Mrs. La Luer, all her sympathy, began to think that she would have to ask him to leave her boarding house.

Then one day a glimpse of his unshaven cheeks, his pasty-faced skin and hollow eyes jerked Con back to sanity. He paid his bills, packed his trunks and took the first train for Chicago. On the long trip he took stock of his possessions. He had a little money, but funeral expenses and days of dissipation had eaten a large hole in his wallet. Obviously he could not remain in Chicago all winter, with nothing to do. An engagement in "big time" vaudeville was out of the question now. It was not that there were many performers with a better act than his—even minus Madeline and the tigress—but the time when bookings should have been made was now past. Con had spent it idling about New Orleans.

He landed in Chicago during a snow storm and promptly was taken down with a severe attack of grippe. It left him with a cough and a feeling of complete fatigue that made him postpone daily any attempt to go to work.

Ordinarily he had found vaudeville bookings easy to secure, but for some reason there seemed to be very few theatre managers who were willing to pay the price Con was obliged to demand for his act. This, Con assured himself, must be due to the fact that Renfro had spread the news that he was temperamental and difficult to handle and that he had walked out on the circus.

Business was not good, the agents told him. Pictures drew better than vaudeville and a good single did as much to fill a house as an animal act, which entailed much greater expense. Con's act, they said, belonged in a circus, anyway, where there were facilities for taking care of the animals. Small theatres lacked the space necessary. Con heard the same objections over and over.

Perhaps had conditions been different he would not have given Amos Sidal and his farm so much as a thought, but after several days of vain attempts to find employment it occurred to the animal trainer that there should be a welcome for Madeline's husband at the farm. It would also be cheaper to recuperate there from his illness. A farm should have plenty of fresh milk, fresh eggs and little excitement.

Besides that he could see Donna again. This idea intrigued Con. He could see how she and her farmer husband were making out. Probably she would not offer him a very cordial welcome. On the other hand, she might be bored by the line with the lion she had been leading. If that were true she would receive her old friend with open arms.

Con knew how Madeline and Donna had hood-winked Amos Sidal by exchanging identities. Now he decided that, unless she had admitted the truth to the family, it was high time she should be compelled to do so. When Grandfather Sidal died the fortune he left to his grandchild would, by rights belong to Madeline's husband.

Thus Con reasoned himself into a frame of mind that sent him to a ticket agency to buy a ticket to Lebanon. There was no use, he decided, to send word to the farm that he was coming. He wanted to get the lay of the land before he walked in on them.

He was not conscious of any desire to injure Donna as he made these plans. If anyone were to suffer, Con thought, it would be her husband. Embittered by the many blows he had received in the past few months, Con centred his rancour on the man who, he felt, had robbed him of the only woman he had ever really loved.

That Donna had never cared for him did not matter, or the fact that, if the blame lay at anyone's door, it lay at Madeline's.

Con argued that Donna had married someone else and, because of this, the whole structure of his future had fallen.

Some men become big with adversity, develop muscles of character and principles, but Con David shrivelled and lost the decency that had carried him far in his chosen profession.

On the trip to Lebanon he visioned himself as Donna's husband and the master of the Sidal property. He saw Bill Sidal gnawing his heart out with disappointment. This picture seemed to please Con mightily. (To Be Continued.)

NOTES FROM THE THEATRES

The screen's most elaborate costume, costing $500, is worn by Grace Moore in one of the sequences of her new Columbia starring vehicle, "Love Me Forever," a musical drama which is showing simultaneously at Alhambra and King's from to-day to Saturday. The costume weighs seventy-five pounds and took more than twenty persons six weeks to make. Ten expert seamstresses spent six full weeks doing nothing but embroidering the costume. It is worn by Miss Moore in one of the musical sequences. The bottom of the skirt is eight feet in diameter. The weight was so great that Miss Moore could not wear it suspended by shoulder straps but had to have a special wide girdle constructed so that the weight of the costume could be supported by the Columbia engineering department. Over it were placed bolt after bolt of the most expensive material. Using silver and nickel thread, workers in the wardrobe department spent weeks attaching several thousand small thousands of seed pearls were strung on it. It also is featured by the added embellishment of more than three hundred white ostrich feathers. "Love Me Forever," like "One Night of Love," was directed by Victor Seltzer. Miss Moore is supported by Frances Langford and Patsy Kelly, principals appearing opposite George Raft in Walter Wanger's Paramount musical comedy drama "Every Night at Eight" scheduled to open at Queen's Theatre at an early date, received the radio proposal from Raymond Pease, western Musical Director of the Columbia Broadcasting Company. Pease became enthusiastic about the singing of the three girls after witnessing a preview of "Every Night at Eight" in which they appear as a sister singing trio. Miss Langford, who is both a protégée of Rudy Vallee, were well-known on the air before entering films. Miss Langford has been singing on the Hollywood Hotel Hour major radio programme in addition to her picture work. Miss Kelly is the surprise member of the group, as she is known to film fans only as a comedian and not as a singer, although she won fame on Broadway as musical-comedy favourite.

"Dante's Inferno"

"Dante's Inferno," one of the most startling dramas ever produced by the motion picture industry, comes on Sunday to the King's Theatre, with scenes of unmatched spectacle and soul-stirring sights that leave the breathless in their seats. The thrilling adventure of Dante in his journey through the Inferno, as recorded in that greatest of all literary classics, "The Divine Comedy" is pictured for the first time on the talking screen as an expression of a modern story theme, and becomes one of the greatest spectacles ever attempted. The screen play is the drama of a modern transgressor which utilizes the symbolism of hell, as expounded in the Dante classic to illustrate its theme. It provides for an amazingly graphic pictorial reproduction of the great spectacle in sequence in which kindly character and devotees of Dante's work, Henry B. Walthall, reads the classic to the principal character, Spencer Tracy, in an effort to make him see the error of his ways and visualizes for him, during his journey, the horrors of the Inferno. The illustrations in the book, the story of Dante's grim experience and the spirit of his philosophy. The modern angle of the film, which has been a link with the spirit and atmosphere of its spectacular parallel, the story of Dante both presenting the same moral, "the sins of yesterday are the sins of to-day, and human nature doesn't change." "Dante's Inferno," which was produced for Fox Film by Sol M. Wurtzel and directed by Henry Ince, will thrill and astound King's Theatre audiences by its breathtaking spectacles, staggering effects and startling drama.

"One New York Night"

A mystery story replete with suspense, loaded with laughs and sprinkled with a delightful romance marks Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's current comedy-drama, "One New York Night," showing at the Oriental Theatre on Friday and Saturday. Introducing a new team to the public, Franchot Tone, romantic leading man and light comic, and Una Merkel, pretty comedienne, are co-featured in this film. The story revolves around a mysterious murder which takes place in a cosmopolitan hotel where a unique cross-section of life is reflected in the various guests who become involved in the crime. Franchot Tone is cast as the man from Wyoming, Una Merkel as the blonde telephone girl who "gets her man," Conrad Nagel, as the private secretary to the deceased broker, and Steffi Duna as the Russian Countess. Also prominent in the cast are Harvey Stephens, Charles Starrett and Louise Henry.

"Dinky"

The youngsters supporting Jackie Cooper in his latest Warner Bros. picture "Dinky," which opens at the Queen's Theatre to-day, form a group that sounds like "Who's who" of the child stars of Hollywood. When the picture was being cast it was decided to give the little star the very best supporting cast and no expense was spared in reaching out and getting the very best in child talent. Betty Jean Hance, who is Jackie's sister, is regarded as one of the most promising youngsters in motion pictures. She had just finished an important part in "Mary Jane's Pa" for Warner Bros., and stepped right into "Dinky." Edith Fellows who has been referred as a "vest pocket" edition of Lily Pons, because of her exceptional fine voice, was given the part of little orphan. George Ernest, who has won more hearts of the screen than any other youngster in the screen with roles in "Little Men" and the orphan of "Edwin Drood" plays a role of Jackie's orphan pal. Another orphanage friend of Jackie in the story is Sydney Miller who appeared in the "Band Plays On" and "Hi, Nellie."

FEVERISH ELECTION ACTIVITY

CAMPAIGN DRAWS TO CLOSE

ESTIMATES VARY

London, Nov. 13. While Government parties are optimistic with the regard to the results of the election, general uneasiness is expressed with respect to the chances of at least four Cabinet Ministers, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, Mr. Godfrey Collins, Sir Kingsley Wood and Mr. Walter Elliot.

Opposition Labour circles show increasing optimism, and hope to bring back to Parliament most of their leaders who lost their seats in 1931, and with greatly increased forces to play a really effective part in opposition.—Reuter.

CLOSING CAMPAIGN

London, Nov. 13. All parties in the General Election held final eye-of-poll meetings to-night, and the candidates' agents and their assistants will be working into the early hours of the morning, putting into final shape the records of the canvass of each constituency which has been carried out in the last week by voluntary helpers of each party.

A picturesque touch is added to these feverish last-minute preparations by the case of an elector whose name was omitted from the electoral register by a printer's error and had his right to vote to-morrow restored to him at the last possible moment by a rule absolute and peremptory made this afternoon against the registration officer by the King's Bench Divisional Court.

Polling begins in many constituencies at seven o'clock to-morrow morning and in all at eight. Then begins the task of each candidate's organisation to get as many as possible of its supporters to poll, and party headquarters have made an urgent appeal to sympathisers for help with motor cars.

ESTIMATES VARY

The newspapers are full of estimates of the results, which vary widely, and the only safe prediction, perhaps, is that whatever happens the results will not be so spectacular as in the last election, when 225 members of the previous Parliament lost their seats and 13 cabinet-ministers were defeated. Counting will begin immediately after the close of the poll in over 200 constituencies, but in the remainder it will be postponed till Friday. All but a few scattered results will be known by Friday evening. It is expected that about 100 results will be known by midnight to-morrow.

The B.B.C. announces that a talk by Mr. Martyn Threlfall, London correspondent of the Sunday Morning Herald, on the General Election will be broadcast in Transmission One on November 14, at 10.00 G.M.T. A similar talk by Mr. A. E. Holdsworth in Transmission 3 will be broadcast at 13.15 G.M.T.—British Wireless.

THE MEMEL SITUATION

BRITAIN WATCHES DEVELOPMENTS

London, Nov. 13. Developments in the political situation in Memel, where the Governor has nominated one of five Lithuanian members in the recently-elected Diet, in which German Memellanders hold 24 seats to four, to the new Directory, are being closely watched by the British Government as one of the signatories of the Memel Statute. The Statute provides that the Directory should enjoy the confidence of the Diet, and the result of the efforts of M. Borchgrevink to form a Government which will secure the support of the majority in the Diet is awaited with interest.—British Wireless.

LOCAL DOLLAR UNCHANGED

MARKET LOOKS STEADIER

The official rate of the Hongkong dollar was unchanged at 1s. 4½d. this morning. Business was done early on at 1s. 4½d. and later at 1s. 4½d. The market looks steadier at these rates.

The Italians seemed to feel that the note would deny the penalties and permit further negotiations.—United Press.

NO REJOINDER

London, Nov. 13. The Italian Note to the British and other Government protesting against the imposition of economic sanctions by the League Powers under Article 16, in view of Italy's resort to war in disregard of her covenants, is still under consideration of the British Government. No immediate rejoinder to the Italian demarche is expected in London, as it is assumed that the Government will wish to consult with other Powers to which the Note has been addressed before deciding on the form of reply.

The representations of the Italian Government refer to the action taken by the League States in virtue of the collective decisions at Geneva, and there is no reason to suppose that the British Government will change the view so often expressed, that the issue lies between Italy and the League, and not between Italy and Great Britain or any other League Power individually.

The Irish Free State Senate to-night passed a Bill authorising sanctions against Italy, which will become law to-morrow.—British Wireless.

LIVING IN AGONY

INVALID'S PLEA FOR DEATH REFUSED

Buffalo, Nov. 13. Miss Anna Becker, 34, who was incurably injured in a motor accident in 1933, has sent a letter to the Erie County Medical Association pleading for "an appointment with a physician to bring me merciful death. He would certainly be able to kill me and end this agony which I endure every hour."

"My decision has not been made hastily," the letter adds. "For 749 horrible days I have thought of death and would have taken my own life long ago except that I lacked the courage to do it."

The Association has replied that mercy killing is impossible.—United Press.

STEEL PRODUCTION

ALL RECORDS BROKEN IN OCTOBER

London, Nov. 13. Steel production statistics for October indicate that all records for the past 80 years have been well and truly beaten by the figure of 907,300 tons, which is over 50,000 tons higher than the previous highest in 1925 and 95,000 higher than October last year.

The fact that the present boom has taken place despite the comparative depression in shipbuilding industry is largely attributable to the expansion of the demand from the engineering, building and automobile industries, whose remarkable activity is not only expected to cause a maintenance of the current rate of production, but also arouses prospects of further steelworks being introduced in the near future.—Reuter.

London, Nov. 13. The Stock Exchange was quiet to-day in view of the General election to-morrow, but the undertone was firm. British funds showed little change and home industrial movements were mostly in an upward direction.—British Wireless.

CHILDREN KEPT IN CHAINS

STANDING COFFIN PUNISHMENT

GRAVE charges of physical torture of prisoners in certain countries were made recently by Miss Cicely M. Craven, hon. secretary to the Howard League for Penal Reform.

Miss Craven was discussing amazing facts which are included in a report shortly to be placed before the League of Nations assembled by the Howard League.

Among the facts which investigations have brought to light are:—

Women and children confined in camps under sole supervision of male convict officers.

Chains up to 31lb. in weight imposed for 12 months continuously. Cross-bar fetters keeping legs 10 inches apart for 10 days continuously.

Girl of 18 kicked in the abdomen by guard; taken away unconscious and left in agony in cell for 24 hours before receiving attention. Later given nine weeks' solitary confinement for complaining.

Estimated normal prison death rate, 40 per cent.

Prison built to hold 3,300 containing 6,300 prisoners.

"In many countries," said Miss Craven, "corporal punishment is used recklessly without any safeguards against permanent injury."

"Solitary confinement, stripped naked in dark, damp, verminous cells is a common punishment for minor infractions of prison rules."

"In one country 'sweat boxes' standing coffins with just room for a man's upright body—are used to extort confession."

"The names of the States concerned are not given in the report," said Miss Craven, "as our experience has shown that to do so might bring further suffering on the prisoners."

"In two countries at least prisoners released from certain institutions are obliged to sign undertakings not to reveal facts of prison treatment on release."

"In another country it is a capital offence to do so." The report is the result of an investigation lasting for more than two years.

TAUBER SUES FOR DIVORCE

TO MARRY BRITISH FILM STAR

Vienna, Oct. 30.
 So that he may be free to marry Diana Napier, the British film star, Richard Tauber, the singer, has sued his wife, Carlotta Tauber-Vanconti for divorce "on his wife's fault" in the Vienna courts.

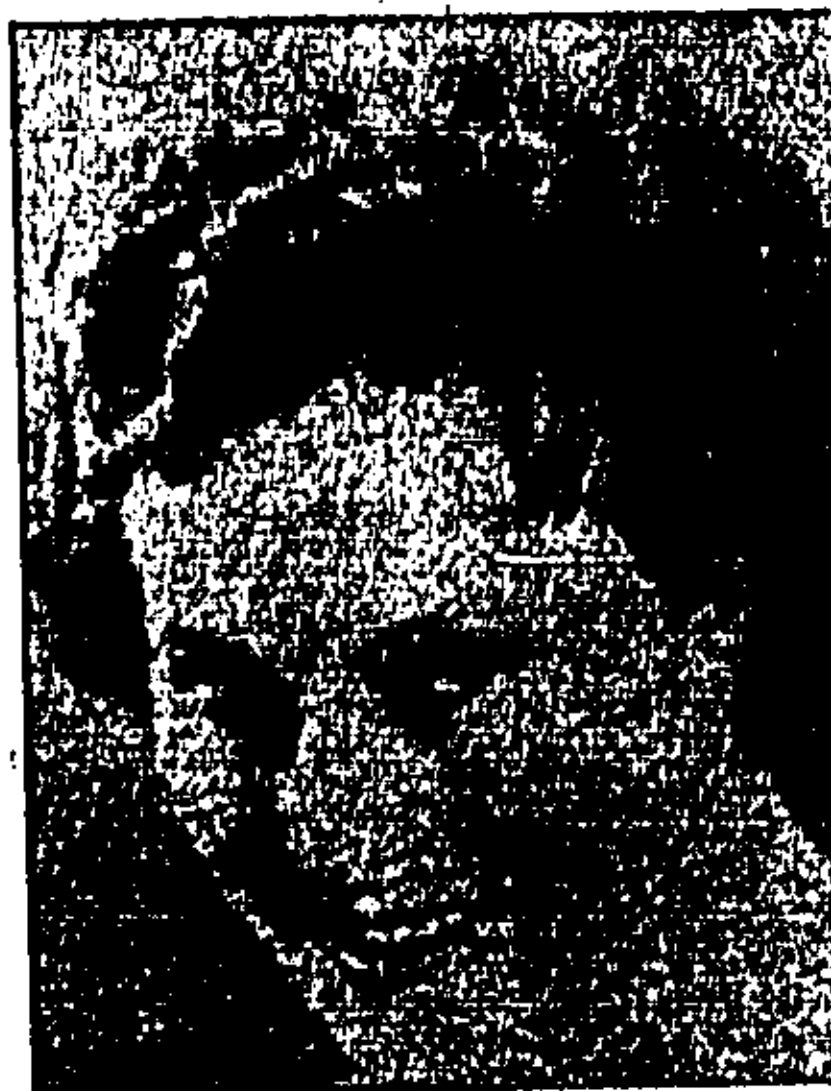

The case was adjourned until December. Tauber was not in court, but is staying in Vienna.

He has since returned to England to act opposite Diana Napier in "Pagliacci."

Tauber married Frau Carlotta Vanconti, an opera singer in Vienna in 1924. They separated, and in 1931 the marriage was dissolved by a Berlin court.

The divorce, however, is not legal in Austria, so Tauber approached Frau Vanconti to consent to divorce before the Austrian courts. She refused. Since June Tauber has stopped payment of her allowance.

"I do not fight against divorce, but for my reputation as a woman and an artist," Frau Vanconti declared.—Reuter.

DIANA NAPIER

WENT ASTRAY, WRECKED A HOME

BECAUSE a telegram addressed to her was delivered to her husband, Mrs. Elizabeth Y. Ford, aged twenty-eight, of Newark (New Jersey), has obtained 3,000 dollars (£600) damages from the Western Union Telegraph Company.

Mrs. Ford alleged that this resulted in the breaking up of her home, and sued for 75,000 dollars (£15,000) for mental shock, pain, and anguish.

Marked "Personal" While she was visiting her mother in West Virginia, Mrs. Ford explained to the court, a friend of the family named Herbert Smith sent her a telegram at her home saying: "Stopping at New Yorker Hotel. If possible meet me Friday at hotel 7 p.m.—Herbert."

Mrs. Ford had no idea why Mr. Smith sent the message.

As the telegram was marked "Personal," the telegraph boy three times refused to deliver it to her husband. But Mr. Ford then sent a woman friend to the Western Union Office, and she obtained a copy of the telegram for him. Mrs. Ford said that she returned to find her husband in a suspicious frame of mind, and later he left her.

HALF A TON OF DRAGON FOUND

MARINE MONSTER

Approximately half a ton of fossilized kronosaurus, an enormous dragon-like creature which existed in the great Australian inland sea, between 90 and 120 million years ago, has just been sent to the Queensland Museum by the finder, Mr. Edgar Young, an honorary collector for the museum.

The reptile is the largest marine monster of which remains have yet been found, states Austral News. It is estimated that it grew to 40 feet in length. The head alone was about six feet long and the jaws contained a hundred or more teeth at least eight inches long.

No fossils of the reptile have been found anywhere in the world other than in Queensland.

ZOO COBRA WAS SWALLOWED BY RIVAL SNAKE BUT KEEPER RESCUED HIM ALIVE

The reptile house at the London Zoo has been the scene of fierce dispute over food.

Two cobras began to fight over a rat and one of them became so enraged that he swallowed his rival.

About two-thirds of the swallowed cobra had disappeared down the throat of his adversary when the keeper arrived on the scene. The unfortunate reptile was pulled back to safety by means of a forked stick and was none the worse for the experience.

The final result of the Zoo python's effort to present the menagerie with its first family of home-bred baby pythons is a nursery containing five youngsters.

Mother snake had laid no fewer than 40 eggs and all were fertile, but there were various complications.

Some of the eggs had become too dry and the pythons died before they hatched; a few of the babies seemed too shy to emerge, and others died soon after birth.

But the five survivors are strong and active and short-tempered. They are about 20 inches in length.

FOUGHT PET BABOON AT EDGE OF PRECIPICE

Capetown, Nov. 1.

AT the edge of a precipice near Harris Smith (Orange Free State) the owner of a pet baboon found himself struggling for life with the beast, which was trying to push him over.

The baboon had behaved well before, except that it could not tolerate dogs.

It would destroy every dog it could find. At first it would pretend to be friendly with the dog until within striking range. Then the baboon would grab the dog, march off with it to a precipice 100 feet high, near the homestead, and hurl it to the rocks below.

Sudden Grab

Lately it had accounted for a few sheep in a similar manner, and its master, Mr. de Wet du Plessis, had begun to think seriously of destroying it.

He took it for a walk, and as they were passing the cliff where the animal had thrown over dogs and sheep, it suddenly grabbed its master round the waist and started to force him towards the precipice.

Mr. du Plessis tried to push it away, but every time he took hold of it the beast bit him, so that he had to use his fists and boots.

Step by step he was forced backwards towards the edge of the precipice. In despair he swung an uppercut at the baboon's jaw. This knocked it out. Mr. du Plessis looked round and found that he was no more than five feet away from the edge.

The baboon, still dazed, was secured with reins, led back to the house, and shot.

According to a local hunter who has shot baboons for many years in the Cape Province, it was the largest specimen of the grey mountain baboon he had ever seen. He considered that it weighed nearly 160 pounds.

30,000,000 BRITONS WILL CAST A VOTE TO-DAY

MOMENTOUS ELECTIONS IN FOUR COUNTRIES

London, Nov. 14.

Approximately 30,613,000 electors are eligible to vote for the 615 members of the new House of Commons to be elected to-day, according to the new register just issued.

There are 14,430,000 men and 16,183,000 women, making the largest electorate in British history.

The previous electorate for England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland was about 29,960,071 and men outnumbered women by approximately 1,750,000.

A century ago the electorate totalled only half a million. Until the reform act of 1918 when women of 30 years of age and over were given the vote the electorate never numbered more than eight million. An additional five million women were added in 1928 when the franchise was extended to women on the same terms as to men.

PASTOR GIVES 6 RULES FOR KEEPING YOUNG

Auburn, Oct. 15.
This prescription for keeping young was given by the Rev. George E. Davis:
Keep your eagerness for new experiences.
Keep the confidence of youth.
Never despair.
Do not try to keep up with youth in your living habits.
Take to heart youth's ability to overlook petty annoyances.
Make a life, not a living.

Temples Looted For Relics?

ART treasures and relics worth thousands of pounds stolen from Chinese temples are finding their way into Britain, according to the London Sunday Chronicle.

It is one of the biggest "rackets" of modern times.

A man who has just returned after spending 30 years in China, told the Sunday Chronicle that he has identified articles which are almost priceless in China.

They are being taken over at ridiculous prices, because even the men who are selling them do not know what they are actually worth.

"Over there," he said, "one of the biggest thriving campaigns ever organised is baffling the police."
"Priceless pieces of jade, golden Buddhas, poem boxes containing the original works of the country's most illustrious poets, bronze figures, temples cut out of solid ivory, and other items, some of which are thousands of years old, are being smuggled out of the country."

Clever Leader
"One of the biggest men in the 'racket' is a former Russian Prince, but the police have been unable to get sufficient evidence against him. He is too careful."

"I have been in touch with people who have bought many of these time-honoured relics looted from temples and other places," he added. "They are now decorating sideboards and other pieces of furniture."

At least 80 per cent. of the electors are expected to cast their ballots, a total of nearly 25,000,000 compared with about 23,000,000 in 1931.

All persons twenty-one years of age or over, except royalty, peers, aliens, bankrupts, lunatics and idiots, are eligible to vote, unless, by mischance, their names have not been included in the election register.

The remnants of plural voting which still exist in Britain make it possible for tens of thousands of electors to vote in more than one constituency.

More than 100,000 men and women university graduates are entitled to vote for one of the twelve members of parliament representing the universities.

In addition they may vote for another candidate standing for the residential constituencies. Oxford University graduates elect two members of parliament, Cambridge two, London University one, combined English universities two, Welsh universities one, Scottish universities three, and Queen's University, Belfast, one.

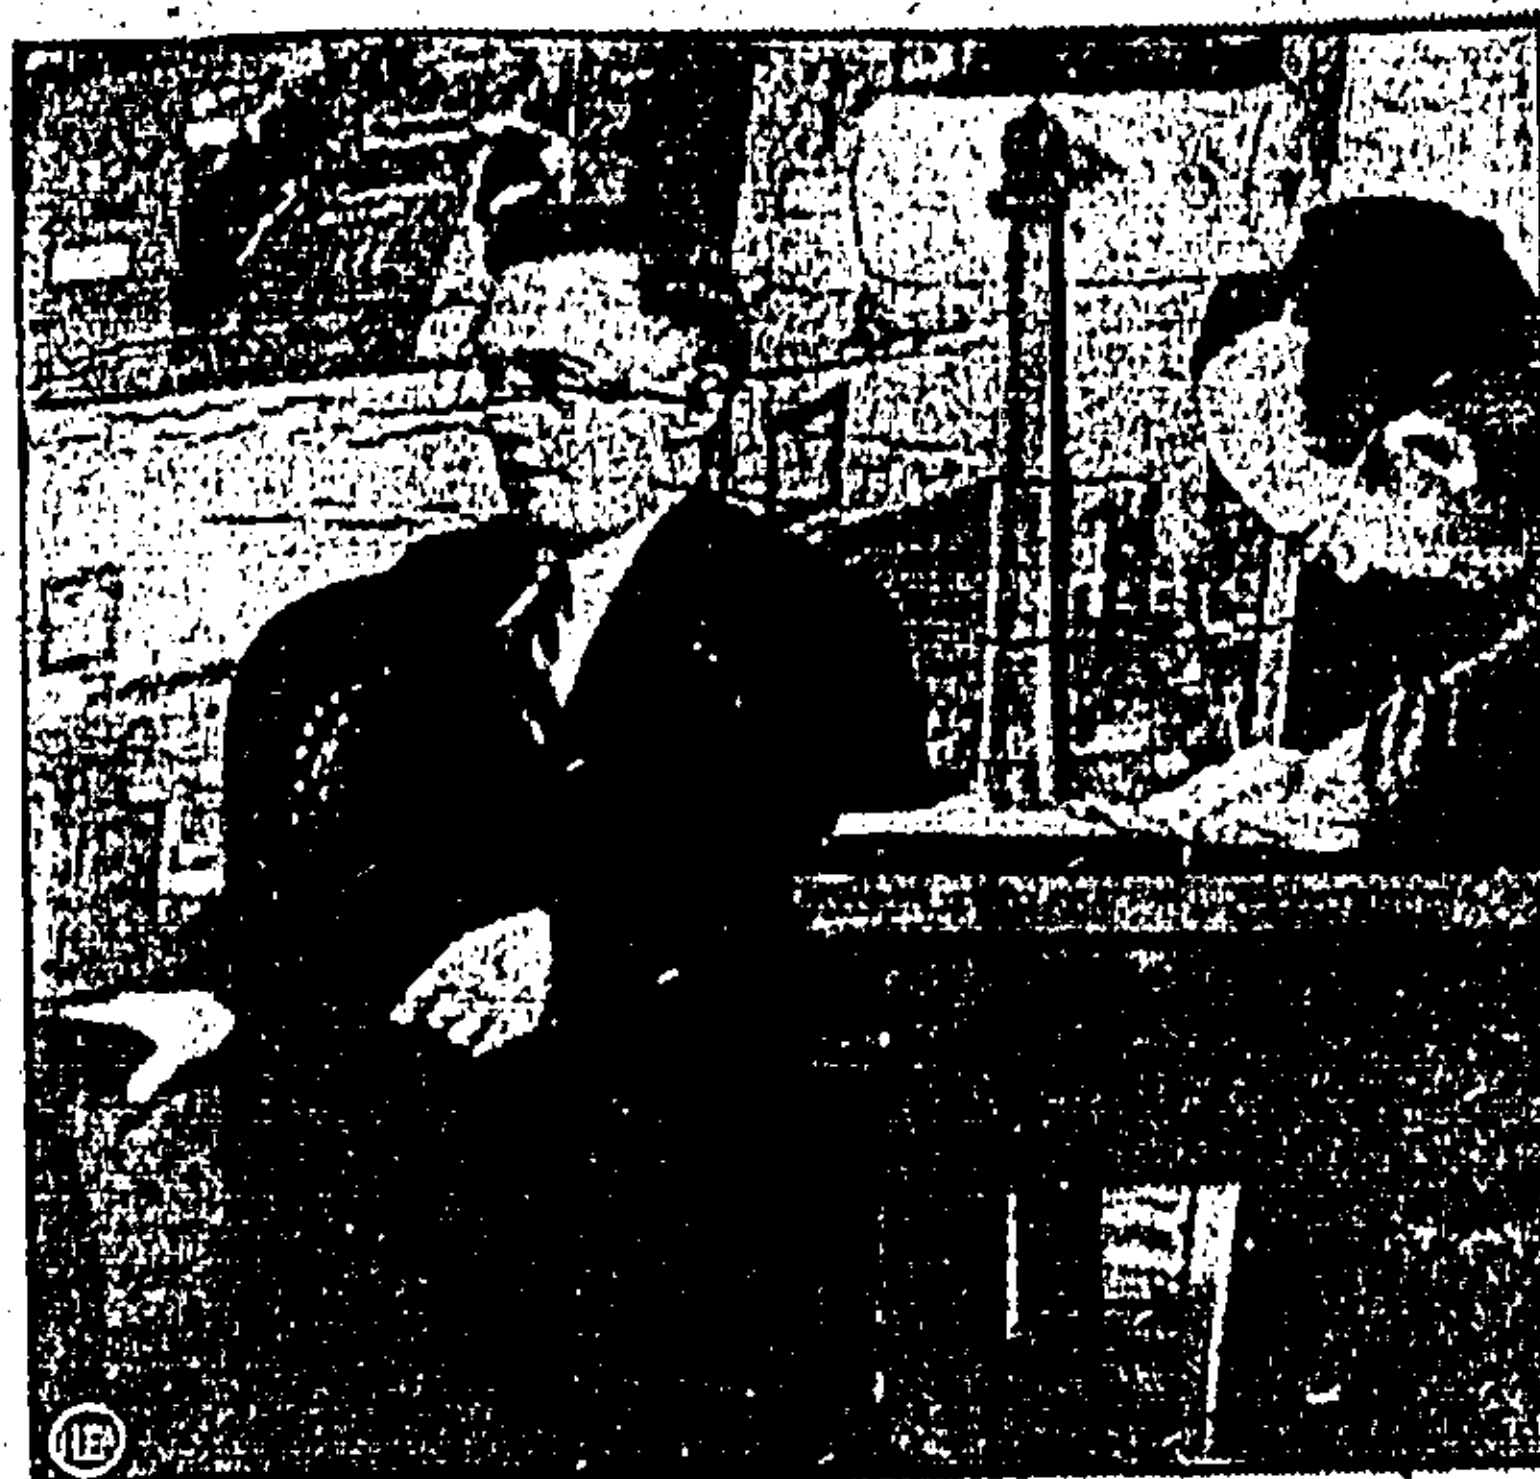

Thousands of electors who are not university graduates qualify nevertheless to vote in two constituencies through their occupation of business premises of at least £10 yearly value in constituencies other than their residential constituencies.

Electors with residential, university and business qualifications, however, may vote in only two of the three constituencies.

The present register of electors was compiled last summer. Householders throughout the country filled in forms listing all persons over twenty-one years of age under their roofs who had resided there for the preceding three months. Included in these reports were the naval and military forces abroad.

Failure to make a return incurred a penalty of £100.—United Press.

BIGGEST AIRCRAFT

Contracts Given for 2,000 R. A. F. Planes

FIRMS WORK NIGHT AND DAY TO COMPLETE 1937 PROGRAMME

The Air Ministry has now given out most of the contracts for the expansion of the Royal Air Force.

It is understood that the total order, including first line machines, and training machines, totals about 2,000 aircraft.

This makes the biggest order given to the British aircraft industry since 1918.

Every aircraft and aero engine firm on the Air Ministry's list is working day and night to complete orders to time-table.

The Home Defence commands of the Royal Air Force will be brought up to a first line strength of some 1,500 to 1,600 machines by March 31, 1937.

New Pilots

This programme gives the country more than 30 new airdromes and more than 2,000 new pilots and 20,000 skilled aircraftmen.

Busy firms, such as Hawker's, have had to farm out a great deal of their work.

The airplanes on order embrace single-seater fighters which can climb to 35,000ft. in a few minutes and cruise at 230 to 250 m.p.h.; day bombers and night bombers with speeds up to 150 m.p.h.; general purpose machines and two-seater fighters; machines for constant reconnaissance; flying boats and training machines.

Here are the bulk of the orders: Armstrong-Whitworth, of Coventry, has a substantial order for Hart Trainers. These are developed from the Hart two-seater day bomber, which flies at about 150 m.p.h.

Tests Completed

Sir John Siddle, head of the Armstrong Siddle Development Corporation, has stated that his companies are so busy with orders for aero engines and aircraft that Armstrong cars will only be built to order.

Vickers are also building a number of these Hart trainers. Vickers also have orders for the new general purpose monoplane, which has lately completed its tests.

The Bristol Aeroplane Co., which is busy on the production of air-cooled radial engines for military and civil purposes, has a substantial order for the Type 142 monoplane, which can reach a speed of 270 m.p.h. and something less when converted for day bombing duties.

This company now has an additional order for Audax machines. These are Army co-operation types, which again are designed by Hawkers.

A 'SIX YEARS' PAINTING JOB

One of the biggest painting jobs in the world has just been begun.

Forty painters are now at work on the entire girder system of Sydney's huge harbour bridge.

It is estimated, says Austral News, that they will take years to do it, by which time it is probable that they will have to begin it all over again.

against the imposition of economic sanctions by the League Powers under Article 16, in view of Italy's resort to war in disregard of her covenants, is still under consideration of the British Government. No immediate rejoinder to the Italian demarche is expected in London, as it is assumed that the Government will wish to consult with other Powers to which the Note has been addressed before deciding on the form of reply. The representations of the Italian Government refer to the action taken by the League States in virtue of the collective decisions at Geneva, and there is no reason to suppose that the British Government will change the view so often expressed, that the issues between Italy and the League, and not between Italy and Great Britain or any other League Power individually.

LADIES' GOLF MEETING

EXCELLENT SEASON REPORTED

The annual general meeting of the Ladies' Section of the Royal Hongkong Golf Club was held at the Helena May Institute this morning. Mrs. Gilmore opened the meeting by reading the Convening Notes.

The adoption of the report and statement of accounts were proposed by Mrs. T. S. Whyte-Smith, who said:—

"Ladies.—The Report and Accounts having been in your hands for some time I shall take them as read. We deeply regret the death during the year of two of our members, Mrs. Fairburn, and Mrs. Perrin.

"You will note that our financial position is sound, we have $50 more in hand than at 30th September, 1934. Your committee decided that a portable typewriter was necessary as the years pass, and accordingly they have bought, on the advice of a sub-committee a portable Remington.

"About half way through the year a change was made from spoons to silver ash-trays as prizes for the monthly qualifiers in the Captain's Cup. There are five or six of these in hand for use in the first months of next year.

"Our thanks are due to Dr. Dovey the Hon. Treasurer for the able way in which she has managed our finances. We are also grateful to Mr. Donald Black, C. A., for kindly auditing the accounts.

GOOD SEASON

"The winter season was a good one, the competitions being well supported. The L. G. U. Medal Competitions proved more popular than last year, perhaps as the result of members admiring the fine medals which Mrs. Sommerfelt and I collected at the prize-giving! The Spring Meeting is now an established part of our Fanning programme. It lasted for three days. On the last day, the prizes were presented by Lady Peel who kindly honoured us with her presence. Unfortunately it was rather a wet day, but in spite of that there was a good turnout of members and the usual photograph was taken. I heartily congratulate Mrs. K. S. Robertson, the winner of the 1935 Championship and all the other prize winners.

"We had one match during the year, Scotland against the Rest. Scotland won. (Applause). "Another match was arranged to take place in September against a team of the Australian girls who have been touring in China and Japan. Unfortunately, only four of them were prepared to play. Four of our members accompanied by Mrs. Gilmore went out with them to Fanning and had an enjoyable day. We played Shanghai foursomes on the New Course. We were driven out by Taino and back by Castle Peak. Our thanks are due to the Men's Committee for a very happy day which I am assured the visitors appreciated. Mr. Dodwell, the Captain of the Club, and Mr. Archbutt, who was Acting Captain at the time, kindly placed cars at our disposal.

"The L. G. U. scratch score of Happy Valley has been reduced by two strokes to 74, by order of the L. G. U. Scratch Score Committee. This brings that course better into line with the Fanning courses and will, I hope, result in handicaps being more satisfactory. The usual Autumn meeting took place at Deep Water Bay in September and was well attended.

COMMITTEE THANKED

"I should like to thank my committee for their kind support during the year. The Hon. Secretary has a very busy time especially during the winter season. Mrs. Gilmore has been a tower of strength. I thank her very sincerely. (Applause). Mrs. Sommerfelt has guided us and our handicaps through another year as ably as ever. I am sure members appreciate how much these two officers have done for them and on your behalf I thank them both. (Applause). We also thank the Men's committee and Colonel Matthews for their kind co-operation and advice, the press for publishing our notices and competition results, and the Helena May Institute for permission to hold our meetings here.

"I have pleasure in proposing the adoption of the report and accounts and when that has been seconded, I shall be pleased to answer any questions to the best of my ability."

The report was seconded by Miss F. Stevenson and carried unanimously by the members.

NEW CAPTAIN

Mrs. T. S. Whyte-Smith proposed that Mrs. A. K. Mackenzie be elected Captain for 1935-36 as she had a life-long connection with the Colony and was one of the Club's best players. This proposal was seconded by Mrs. Gilmore and carried unanimously.

After voting was taken for the fled before the arrival of the police.

Immediately news of the incident reached the headquarters of the Japanese Landing Party, two motor-cycles were despatched to the scene by motor-cycle. They left shortly before ten o'clock, however, the work of investigation being left to the Settlement Police. Up to a late hour last night, no arrests had been made. No one was injured.

EXTRA PATROLS ON DUTY

A guard was set over the shop by police from the Loza Police Station, and over two other Japanese shops, one a dispensary, in Canton Road. Extra men were sent out on patrol duty in the Central District, with special instructions to pay particular attention to any Japanese shops in the neighbourhood of their beats. No other incidents of a similar nature were reported, while the evacuation from Chapel ceased at a fairly hour in the evening.

According to Rengo, violation of the Chinese Government's assurance regarding the suppression of anti-Japanese organizations was seen on the night of November 12 by the Japanese military authorities here.

The handbills distributed by the demonstrators were signed by the Anti-Japanese National Salvation Association, which, an official spokesman alleged, is closely linked with the Kuomintang headquarters.

CLEAR INTENTIONS

"We have demanded on several occasions that such bodies be dissolved. The existence of these organizations and their continued depredations clearly indicate to us what are the intentions of the Kuomintang," he declared.

"Should they let matters drag on it might lead to a repetition of unfortunate incidents which may cause a reversal in the improving relations between China and Japan," the official told Rengo.

POWERFUL SHANGHAI BATTING

Prowse and Ballard, while Leckie pulled Ballard to the Chater Road railings.

FINE WICKET-KEEPING

Holland-Martin was in his best form behind the stumps and brilliantly fielded balls wide on the leg side.

Kermani pulled out a fine cover drive against Ballard which deserved more than a single, and in the same over jumped out and dangerously lofted the ball to long-on, the batsmen running three.

In the next over, Prowse pitched one well up to Leckie who essayed a huge hit, missed the ball and was clean bowled. The score was then 132-48, after 90 minutes' play.

Leach joined Kermani and finely drove Prowse to the long-on boundary, the ball being temporarily lost underneath the public stand.

In Harper's next over, Kermani reached his half century with a pull to square leg and a late cut—both boundary shots. He made his runs, without giving a chance, out of 100 added after the fall of the first wicket, and he had hit seven 4's.

NO BOWLERS

After sending up the 150, Leach hit a gorgeous six off Ballard, who again displaced Harper, straight driving the ball over the screen at the Naval Yard end. The 160 was signalled after 100 minutes.

The Services were obviously suffering from a dearth of bowlers, and Garthwaite returned to send down a no-ball and to be hit for seven in the one over.

The batsmen continued merrily. Leach drove Ballard for four and Kermani lifted Garthwaite to the public stand to send up 180 in 110 minutes.

In the same over, Leach tried to hook Garthwaite and was caught at leg. 181-5-18.

Prowse relieved Ballard and had four men on the boundary for Jenkins. Garthwaite was at silly mid-off and the first ball he received Jenkins crashed it in the direction of the Lieutenant. But Garthwaite decided that discretion was the better part of valour and refused the hot chance.

Kermani continued to bat as though the ball was as big as a football, while Jenkins neatly turned Garthwaite to the leg boundary.

Lunch was taken with the score at 201 for 5, Kermani being 78 not out and Jenkins 8 not out.

BANKERS BATTLE

CONVENTION. SCENE OF TUMULT

(Special to "Telegraph")

New Orleans, Nov. 13. The New Deal policies became such an issue at the American Bankers' Association convention here to-day that the delegates in a tumultuous session decided to hold a secret ballot for the nomination of a second vice-president. The second vice-president automatically becomes president after two years.

The issue was drawn between the supporters of Mr. E. G. Bennett and the Utah bankers who opposed the injection of national policies into the elections.

Mr. O. W. Adams of Salt Lake City sharply criticised the recovery policy and advocated a bankers' boycott of the Government's securities with a view to "salting a wasteful government's standing."

Mr. Bennett and Mr. Adams were finally nominated for the vice-presidency, but while the secret ballot was proceeding, which had not been resorted to in years, Mr. Bennett withdrew.

Mr. Adams had charged Mr. Bennett with being indirectly associated with the Government's controlled financial institutions because Mr. Bennett is a member of a corporation headed by a brother of the Federal Reserve Governor, Mr. Marriner Eccles. Mr. Robert V. Flemming, Washington, D.C., is this year's president.—United Press.

SHIPS' COOKS CHARGED

OPIUM ABOARD THE TAI YUAN

Two men, Yeung Or-ling, aged 32, described as a "boy," and Yuen Or-chuen, aged 48, cook, were charged before Mr. E. I. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning with possession of 190 taels of raw opium on board the s.s. Tai Yuan yesterday.

First accused pleaded guilty and second accused denied the charge. Detective-Sergeant Riddell, prosecuting, stated that the prosecution would accept the pleas as they stood. Both defendants were employed as cooks on board the steamer; the first accused was the assistant of the second. The opium was found in a basket of vegetables which first defendant had.

Second accused was discharged and a fine of $3,800, with the alternative of nine months' hard labour, was imposed upon the first.

INFLATION TALK

RUMOURS HEARD ON WALL STREET

New York, Nov. 13.

Inflation talk is spreading on Wall Street due to the steadily mounting bank reserves, plus the efforts to bring them into use.

The rising government deficits have made many believe that some inflationary moves will undoubtedly be made when Congress convenes.

President Roosevelt's plea to the bankers to extend more liberal credit on easier rates in addition to the suggestions of others for the extension of realty loans, is all regarded as providing for credit inflation which many fear cannot be controlled.

DEVALUATION TO BE AVOIDED
Washington, Nov. 13.

The statements made by President Roosevelt and Mr. Jesse Jones, the Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, at the American Bankers' Association yesterday, have reinforced the experts' conviction that the President will henceforth avoid any further experiments.

Experts in the R.F.C. express the opinion that a conservative operation of the silver programme and the avoidance of any further devaluation may logically be expected.—United Press

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, Nov. 13.
The following reports on the New York Stock Market have been received through Messrs. Swan, Cul-
bertson and Fritz:

The Hull Street Journal report on yesterday's markets:—The markets
today closed higher, with trading on
the light side after early profit-taking.
It is a noteworthy fact that the volume was light during the period
of profit-taking and trading increased
on the advance. Steel and railroad issues were the leaders in the upturn, while utility, oil and mercantile securities gained strength. The market for bonds was irregular and stocks on the Curb Exchange were
also irregular.

S. C. & F. New York office cables:
Stocks: Securities were in renewed demand towards the close and the markets look higher.

Glidden Company's October sales were 42 per cent. over the corresponding month of last year.

Revised demand deposits, based on 191 instead of 91 in the cities amount to $13,558,000,000, down $40,000,000
from the previous week and up
$2,297,600,000 from the corresponding period of last year.

Cotton: Early sellers have apparently covered on the failure of the reaction to carry prices lower. The market is very steady. Should the current year's consumption exceed that of last year, as it is expected to,
prices must apparently meet the demands for the Government held stocks.

Wheat: There is some apprehension that the Canadian reciprocal trade agreement will affect wheat,
which we consider extremely doubtful.
Foreign weakness continues, with Australia, the Argentine and Soviet Russia offering.

Corn: Aside from the steadiness
of December corn on delayed movement of the crop, this market is probably without any special trend.
It is reported that 2,000,000 bushels of Argentine corn are afloat for this
a high moisture content in the new crop.

Rubber: General buying is better,
with a considerable amount of switching of December options instead of liquidation. The market was steady
at the close.

BRITAIN POLLS

The British electorate goes to the polls to-day in an election which has been somewhat suddenly thrust upon the country. As to the outcome of the voting, the general view appears to be that the National Government will receive a new lease of life, though with a somewhat reduced majority. When the Government went into power in 1931, it secured an amazingly large majority, close on five hundred, consequent on the overthrow of the Labour Administration. Having secured no fewer than 287 seats at the 1929 election, the Labourites had their strength reduced to 52 in the last Parliament. Since then, they have won a few by-elections, but, in the main, the strength of the National Government has remained largely unimpaired. Political prophets are now forecasting a majority of between 100 and 170 for the Baldwin faction, with Labour securing as many as 230 seats. The last-named forecast may turn out to be an over-estimate, but it has to be borne in mind that the actual votes secured by the Labourites in the last General Election were far greater than the number of seats held would indicate. None the less, it will be surprising if Labour wins back anything approaching two hundred seats lost at the last election. The Government has shown considerable generalship in appealing to the country at this juncture, when all parties are at least united on the question of upholding the principles on which the League of Nations stands. There have been suggestions in Opposition circles that Mr. Baldwin and his followers, taking advantage of this fact, have exploited the international situation by deciding on an election at this time. But there is a further point to be kept in mind, namely, that the Government would naturally like a definite assurance from the electorate that its policies in the present juncture are in line with national thought. No such assurance could be given by putting the matter to the vote in the Parliament whose life has just ended, for the simple reason that the House of Commons as then constituted was elected as far back as 1931. The issue could be decided if there were machinery for holding a referendum on the question, but no such machinery exists. From some angles, it is unfortunate that the Government should put its strength to the test in the midst of a big international crisis, but it may be assumed that Mr.

*Labour Government resigned August and National Government formed by Ramsay MacDonald. General Election held October.

The thirty-seventh Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the ninth of King George V. will be brought into being at the General Election to-day.

About £2,000,000 will change hands in the process of its birth. Its annual running costs will be about £800,000.

The taxpayers will have to find some £350,000 of the cost of the General Election. This represents payments to returning officers and other costs paid by the Treasury.

The candidates will be responsible for spending, roughly, £750,000.

The remaining £900,000 will be found by the political parties from their own coffers and from generous donors who are prepared to back their political faith with cash.

These estimates are necessarily approximate. If they are borne out the election will not be unduly expensive.

THE General Election of 1931, which gave the National Government its record majority, cost in candidates' expenses £654,105, and the Treasury spent £290,000. What the political parties spent in propaganda is their secret.

Only on five occasions since the Corrupt Practices Act of the 'eighties put a control on the cascade of cash which drenched the hustings, have the expenses of the candidates and the State combined exceeded £1,000,000. The difference between the cost of those two items on the last

G.B.S. HAS HIS SAY

George Bernard Shaw would not be G.B.S. if he did not disagree with prevalent opinion. Thus in the Ethiopian controversy he takes a line of his own. He has no sentiment in the matter. He thinks that to make any part of the globe available for human habitation and social development at any higher level than that of the birds and beasts, the first material necessity is a well engineered and policed main road, with water supplies from artificial wells, and refuelling stations. Ancient Rome saw to that, like-wise all the great empire-making nations. If the ferocious natives tried to hinder the road-makers, so much the worse for the natives, even to their extermination. This opening-up to civilisation has hitherto been done by unilateral action. Now it should be done by concerted action, that is, by the League of Nations. But, unfortunately, the League is not equipped for such work. Mr. Bernard Shaw is on the side of the road engineers and will not tolerate any attack on our civilisation. Rather than have that he would drop the Geneva Council down the crater of Vesuvius. He has nothing to say of the sanctity of international contracts or security against war by co-operation. But then, Mr. Bernard Shaw is never troubled by the qualms and doubts from which lesser men suffer. He sees one point—his own—and makes straight for it, ignoring all others.

Baldwin and his advisers have taken careful stock of the situation and are confident of their ability to secure a fresh vote of confidence. Nothing is sure in British elections, for which reason it would be unwise to be too precise in forecasting the probabilities. None the less, there are grounds for thinking that the National Government will once again win the day. Any other result would be little short of calamitous.

THIS mobilisation of men and money is a delicate and exacting business. Men are easier to collect than money.

Given two men of equal political ability and promise, the choice is more likely to fall on the aspirant who can pay £400 or more a year to local party funds than on the man who aims to live on his Parliamentary salary.

Yet some impecunious young men have a chance. They are given the forlorn hope seats which have to be fought for tactical reasons. It often pays a party to run a candidate without hope of success against a leader of another party so that the opponent may be tied to his own division, unable to go to the aid of a colleague in danger.

More forlorn hopes were won at the last election than at any election in the last 30 years. There is not likely to be a repetition this time.

For some trades a General Election is a harvest; for others a loss. Printers, billposters, garages, hall owners, house agents, solicitors, taxi-drivers and car hirers all benefit. Even dressmakers find their business increasing because women leaders and workers require new dresses to wear on the platforms.

The City finds that the immminence of an election creates a feeling of uncertainty. Markets become stagnant. The only consolation to the City is a gamble on the results.

"Run along, now, dear. I'm busy."

Sanctions?

In 161 B.C. Julius Maccubus sent ambassadors to Rome to propose a treaty of alliance. The Senate accepted, and both sides covenanted, if either of them were attacked, not to help the aggressor with "victuals, weapons, money or ships" (1 Maccabees, viii., 19-29.)

Shot At Dawn

The Nazi Government look upon the sharp rise in the British Empire birth-rate—quintuplets in Canada, quadruplets in New Zealand, and now quadruplets in London—as a challenge, almost an act of aggression. I am reminded of the impoverished but patriotic German couple who could not afford a perambulator. The husband, however, worked in a perambulator factory. Gradually he managed to convey to his home a sufficient number of spare parts. One evening he settled down, in his attic, to the task of assembling a perambulator. After a few hours he emerged looking hot and exasperated. "No matter how I fit it together," he said to his wife, "the thing always turns out to be a machine-gun."

A fort is a place to put men in. A fortress is a place to put women in. Masculine, man; feminine, woman; neuter, corpse. Tarzan is a short name for the American flag. Its full name is Tarzan stripes. A lock-out is a man who comes home too late.

AMERICA SLASHES DUTIES

RECIPROCITY TREATY

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages, Ordinance, 1935. Received, November 14, 5 a.m.)

Washington, Nov. 13. Although the terms of the Canada-America trade treaty, which President Roosevelt has authorized the Administration to sign, are not yet published, it is believed that American products on Canada's preferential list include motor cars, iron and steel products, chemicals and certain textiles.

In return, the United States is making concessions with respect to cattle, milk and cream, and lumber.

Duties on numerous Canadian products, it is believed, will be reduced by fifty per cent. and Canada is granting the United States a special tariff, plus additional concessions, with an average reduction of over twenty-five per cent. in import duties.

The United States' reduction of duty on liquor reported to be fifty per cent., is limited to "American type" whiskey, which can only mean rye and what is known to the trade as Bourbon, and this means that there will be no change in the duty on Irish and Scotch whiskey.—Reuter Special.

London, Nov. 13. Preliminary figures of Overseas trade in October, published by the Board of Trade, show that the total exports of United Kingdom produce and manufactures were valued at £39,865,000, compared with £34,098,265 in September and £36,748,545 in October, 1934.

Total imports were £73,383,000, compared with £60,830,697 in September and £68,993,589 in October, 1934.

Total re-exports were £1,732,000, against £1,810,838 in September and £1,000,668 in October, 1934.

For the ten months January to October, exports totalled £351,643,000, against £326,765,000 for the corresponding period of 1934; imports totalled £612,410,000, against £605,290,000, and re-exports £1,555,000, against £1,437,000.—British Wireless.

BRITISH STEEL PRODUCTION

HIGHEST FOR PAST EIGHT YEARS

London, Nov. 13. The production of steel ingots and castings in the United Kingdom in October amounted to 907,300 tons, compared with 855,900 tons in September and 821,000 tons in October, 1934.

October production is the highest since March, 1927. Production of pig iron in October was 544,300 tons, compared with 529,600 tons in September and 527,110 tons in October, 1934.—British Wireless.

SERIOUS CLASH IN CAIRO

POLITICAL FEELING AT DANGER POINT

Cairo, Nov. 13.

There were further disturbances here this evening, following a huge Wafdist mass meeting which passed a resolution for non-co-operation with Great Britain and demanded the resignation of Nessim Pasha's Government.

The situation took a decidedly serious turn when angry crowds attacked police with bottles and stones. The police were forced to fire on several occasions, and it is understood there were many casualties on both sides.

The outbreak to-night was the climax of three days of political excitement over the attitude of Britain and the Egyptian constitutional question.

CASUALTY LIST

Cairo, Nov. 13. Forty-five police were injured, thirteen of them seriously, during the rioting in Tanbeh, before the police opened fire on the crowd. One civilian was killed and three were seriously injured. The crowd burned a police lorry and motorcycle.—Reuter.

Particular criticism has been directed at Sir Samuel Hoare's speech at the Lord Mayor's banquet in London on November 9, in which the Foreign Minister declared that His Majesty's Government had advised against re-enactment of the 1923 and 1930 Constitutions on the grounds that the first was unworkable and the second was universally unpopular.

Sir Samuel Hoare denied that Great Britain opposed the return of a Constitution suited to Egypt's requirements, but it has been suggested that Britain has no intention of urging reintroduction of a Constitution. It was this suggestion that fanned the fire of unrest in Cairo to-night.

Excitement was intensified when Wafdists late last night decided to withdraw their support from Nessim Pasha on the ground that he was not prepared to disregard the advice of Great Britain.—Reuter.

TWO KILLED

Cairo, Nov. 13. Two student Nationals were killed and 175 police and students were injured during rioting in Cairo, Tanbeh and Port Said. Steel-helmeted police opened fire with shot-guns upon a massed mob of students who were stoning the British Consulate here and shouting "Down with England."

The demonstrators were led by the extremist faction of the Wafd, a party of which the Prime Minister is a moderate member.

The police were ordered to fire after repeated futile baton charges. Thereafter ambulances changed through the jammed streets taking the injured to hospital.

No-one was killed by the police fire. One student was killed at Tanbeh when a staircase collapsed during a meeting and another died as a result of a wound from a random shot fired by one of his fellow-demonstrators.

DISPERSE CROWD

At Port Said the police dispersed a demonstration in the native cemetery in connection with the anniversary of the death of Zaghloul Pasha, former Prime Minister and violent anti-English leader.

Police restored order everywhere early in the afternoon. However, there was renewed rioting in Cairo following a meeting addressed by Nessim Pasha, the opposition leader.

The police quelled the rioters by firing volleys of blank cartridges over the heads of the milling throngs.—United Press.

ITALIAN PLAN OF CAMPAIGN

WATER HOLES WILL BE SEIZED

TANKS' LOSS DENIED

Asmara, Nov. 13. General Graziani's plan of advance in South Ethiopia will consist of seizing successively a series of water holes, thus securing his communications.

As the water holes are few and far between, they cannot be attacked except from long distances across the desert.

The advance will be made by mechanised units armed with machine-guns. On arrival at a water hole, the transport will be formed into a ring facing the desert. It will then await a relieving convoy, and on the latter's arrival the first convoy will make the next jump forward, leaving the water hole impregnable guarded.—Reuter.

MAN QUERIES FINE

TOLD HE CAN MAKE APPEAL

Li Wing, 39, unemployed, was charged before Mr. E. I. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning with possessing an illicit still and apparatus at No. 242 Reclamation Street, second floor; possession of 20 gallons of fermenting material; and possession of 24 gallons of dutiable Chinese spirits.

Revenue Officer A. W. Grimmit presented, and stated that the still was large enough to distil 14 to 15 gallons of spirits a day, on which about $20 duty could be charged. The still was new and was actually working at the time of the raid.

On the first two charges fines of $250 each, or, in default, three months' hard labour were imposed, and on the last a fine of $10, or 14 days, was imposed. Sentences to run concurrently.

On being fined defendant said, "According to your Worship's powers you cannot fine me so much on the second charge, because I did not have much material."

Defendant admitted that he had ten to twenty cattles of fermenting material.

"His Worship stated that he imposed such a heavy fine in order to deter people from doing this sort of thing. 'You can appeal against it if you like,' he added.

HOW LEACH FOOLED THE PRESS

DEMON BOWLER JOKE

(By "Veritas").

Donald Leach's little joke on the local Press when, in an interview upon the arrival of the Shanghai Interport team, he gave a vivid description of the demon fast bowling of E.M.P. Williams, is now well-known history.

But yesterday, during the fifth adjournment at the K.C.C. in an amplification of the joke, an Interport player, I am not vouching for its veracity. You can fool some of the Press all the time, etc., etc.

However the yarn goes that when Shanghai turned out for their first practice last Thursday it was arranged to prove to our eagle-eyed Pressmen how devastatingly fast was Mr. Williams.

Williams was to all intents and purposes given the ball, but actually Kermani retained it. Stokes, I am told, was batting, and Williams went back some 25 yards for his run while Kermani dropped back somewhere near the Supreme Court boundary.

Up pounded Williams to the wicket, brought over his arm with a magnificent action. Stokes made a wild slash and the next moment Kermani was thrusting back the ball which he had held all the time. "Don't!" observed the startled scribes, and hurried back to their offices to write about the bowler whose deliveries couldn't be seen once the ball had left the hand. Happily I was on a ship in the China Sea when this happened.

THE NEW L.B.W. RULE

Eagerly Accepted By New Zealand

(By Geoffrey Simpson)

London, Oct. 24. Having predicted that the experimental L.B.W. rule would become universal, I ought not to be surprised at yesterday's development—an invitation to New Zealand to make the change.

But the M.C.C. certainly do move fast once they reach a decision. Scarcely had Australia been requested to come into line than a similar cable from Lord's was on the way to the New Zealand Cricket Council.

And the New Zealanders, without even resorting to a ballot, gave the new rule a welcome and will put it in force for all the games to be played in their country by E. R. T. Holmes's team.

All of which bears out what The Daily Mail has been saying since last summer—that the L.B.W. change is going to become permanent.

SECRETIVE

If there is any complaint to be made, it is that the M.C.C. have been too secretive in their negotiations.

England, after all, is the home of cricket, and you would think we would get official information of what is going on.

Yet the first news of the M.C.C.'s invitation to Australia reached London from Sydney, while information that New Zealand had also been approached comes from Wellington.

It was just the same, if you remember, over the leg-theory business. News of the M.C.C.'s activities in London usually reached English cricket followers via Australia.

INTERNATIONAL SOCCER GAME

FAST ENCOUNTER

Edinburgh, Nov. 13. Scotland to-day beat Ireland by two goals to one in the International Football Competition.

The teams turned out as selected and 28,000 spectators saw the game open under ideal conditions, the weather being fine and without any wind to bother the players.

The first half was goalless and very even, but after the interval, Hambrick, the Chelsea centre-forward sent in a hard shot which Jackson (Chelsea) the Scottish goalkeeper could only push away to Kelly. The Dorcy County left winger fastened on the ball and netted with a low drive.

Play continued at a great pace and amid great excitement Scotland forced two corners, from one of which Walker hit the cross-bar with a smashing shot.

Scotland pressed continuously and Scott saved several stinging shots before Duncan scored the winning goal a minute from the close.

The teams were: Scotland—Jackson (Chelsea), Anderson (Hearts), Cummings (Partick), Massie (Hearts), Simpson (Glasgow Rangers), Hastings (Sunderland), Delaney (Celtic), Walker (Hearts), Armstrong and Mills (Aberdeen), Duncan (Derby).

Ireland—Scott (Belfast Celtic), Cook (Everton), Fulton (Belfast Celtic), McCullough (Manchester City), Jones (Infield), Mitchell (Chelsea), Duggan (Leeds), Stevenson (Everton), Bambrick (Chelsea), Doherty (Blackpool), Kelly (Derry City).—Reuter.

Cricketers' Brighter Billiards

(By FRANK FOXON)

London, Oct. 24. From the Oval to Burroughes and Watts—who are celebrating their centenary this week in Soho Square.

The players: Percy Fender and Alf Gover, of Surrey County Cricket. The referee: Jack Hobbs. And the billiards match yesterday—it was the most entertaining one I ever saw.

When Gover, who is not a very good batsman, made a break of ten Jack Hobbs said:

"Double figures, and the first time for two years."

"I'm playing billiards, not cricket," retorted Gover severely.

POTTING THE WHITE

At the slightest opportunity the white was potted.

"A gentleman's game?" said Fender.

"Gover won the match, but I do not think the scores matter much. It was just good fun."

Kermani Again: Scores A Hard-Hitting Century

(By "Veritas").

BATSMEN were in a tearing hurry at the K.C.C. yesterday where, fresh from their narrow Interport defeat, the Shanghai team were entertained by the Kowloon Cricket Club in a whole day match.

FIVE and a quarter hours of actual play produced 443 runs. Of these Shanghai scored 270 in 200 minutes.

JUST as well the K.C.C. is not a built-up area!

IT was happy-go-lucky cricket Kermani, hitting everything which remotely resembled a bad length ball, collected 115 in 140 minutes.

YET at fifth Kermani complained that he was not seeing the ball properly!

AS a matter of fact it was noticeable that he was inclined to play outside Burnett's deliveries, but with the exception of a hard length to Hung when he was in the twenties, Kermani never looked like getting out. It was in every respect, a very fine innings, and earned for him the bat presented by Mr. Justice Lindsell for the best batting performance of the day.

LECKIE also showed something of the form which gave him a place in the Interport side, 115 also resulted from a mixture of aggressive and dignified strokes, in both cases the ball being played right in the middle of the bat.

JENKINS gave us a new impression. He batted extremely well. I like him to help Kermani carry the score from 144 to 233, and had an individual contribution of 27. He reaped a rich harvest from Frank Goodwin, until that astute bowler plucked his defence with a lovely ball.

KOWLOON'S bowling was not of the best. Goodwin, showing no signs of the injury which kept him out of cricket last year, bowled as well as anybody, but was not consistent. Far too many full tosses on the leg stump. Still 4 for 67 after Shanghai had declared at 270 for 4 were not bad figures.

APART from Ernie Fincher's work at cover, and Hung's snappy catch at first slip to dispose of Elliott, the fielding left a lot to be desired. Lots of singles were turned into boundaries because the fielders did not get down to the ball.

THE innings terminated on a bright note. Stokes disposed of Goodwin with a wonderful catch at leg, taking the ball on the run only a few inches from the ground. Then Booth caught Starling Jex while running towards the boundary.

JENKINS sent down a queer assortment. So many on the leg side. He was lucky not to have had 40 runs scored from such stuff. But the batsmen timed hopelessly. Three times in succession Hung clean missed with big pulls.

ing Mrs. Kirkwood arrived back in the Colony by the Ranchi, and as she is already recognised as one of the Colony's leading lady players, it is difficult to see how she can be left out of the team.

The Kowloon Tong team includes Miss Alison Mackenzie and S. Gray, who played together for the Kowloon Cricket Club in the league during part of last season, while Mrs. White, originally with St. Andrews, will be partnered by Wong, a newcomer to league badminton.

Miss Marion Bryson, another erstwhile K.C.C. league player is lining up with G. A. White to form the third pair.

The Club do Recreio are turning out a strong team against Kowloon Tong. The first pair are Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Sousa, who last season figured in the "A" team. Playing on their own court the Recreio "B" should win fairly comfortably.

POWERFUL RECREIO The first string is again very powerfully represented. M. A.

ARTHUR Lay, having, I think, his first serious innings of the season, batted in best style for 71. There was no reason for him getting out. He played a positive "cow" shot to Jenkins and paid the penalty.

THE score-book showed that his most productive hits yielded one five and ten 4's. Perhaps Leach was rather kind. He opened with "Laywood" Williams (Nearly got a Blue they tell me, but not for bowling!) and Baker. This enabled Lay to get his eye in. And as the reason for my earlier observation that it was his own fault he got out.

NORMAN Mackay batted with the utmost confidence and with Lay put on 71 for the first wicket. Then he directed a hard pull towards Leckie standing on the square-leg boundary, and that was that. By the way those 71 runs were scored in 36 minutes. The telegraph board became an animated object.

BEYOND Lay and Mackay only Burnett was capable of dealing with the Shanghai attack, which was subsequently tightened up. Leach bringing on himself, Pat Madar, Jenkins and Elliott.

I THOUGHT Burnett's knock was delightful. It contained four very hard hit boundaries and his 32 runs were made in 26 minutes. It wasn't classical batting, but it was sincere and whole-hearted and proved that even Jenkins and Leach could be knocked about.

BY way of interest it should be noted that Leach used nine bowlers. Five of them didn't get a wicket and bowled only 13 overs between them.

IT was to be expected that Pat Madar would do most damage. His five-wickets—cost—43—runs. Leckie came along with two for seven and Jenkins had a couple for 16.

JENKINS sent down a queer assortment. So many on the leg side. He was lucky not to have had 40 runs scored from such stuff. But the batsmen timed hopelessly. Three times in succession Hung clean missed with big pulls.

Daughter Of Famous Tennis Player To Wed

MISS E. BROOKES

A London lawn tennis romance is soon to have its sequel in a wedding at Melbourne Cathedral.

On November 9 Mr. R. F. Bessemer Clark, who is a member of the Melbourne Club, Kensington, sailed for Australia to marry on January 7 Miss Elaine Brookes, second daughter of Mr. Norman Brookes. In his day the world's greatest lawn tennis player.

Miss Brookes played and watched a lot of lawn tennis during a European tour with her father this year, and it was then that she met Mr. Bessemer Clark in London.

PLAYED IN DOUBLES

"We were introduced at the Melbourne Club," he told me today. "We met afterwards at Wimbledon and played together in the mixed doubles at Lady Crofield's tennis garden party."

"I believe our wedding will be attended by many tennis friends; possibly F. J. Perry, who when in Australia visits Mr. Brookes, will be there."

Mr. Bessemer Clark is a great-grandson of Sir Henry Bessemer, inventor of the process which transformed the manufacture of steel.

VISITED HONGKONG

Miss Elaine Brookes was a visitor to Hongkong last year when she accompanied her father who was on a tour of the Orient extending invitations to leading athletes and tennis players to take part in the Melbourne Centenary celebrations.

During her brief stay here Miss Brookes played tennis in a garden party at Government House, while Mr. Brookes spent his time on the local golf courses.

dary and with the ball coming over his head. Typical examples of the difference between the good club cricketer and the Interporter.

AFTER the game there was the customary ceremony of presenting the flag. Mr. Justice R.E. Lindsell, President of the K.C.C. called upon Frank Goodwin to give the flag to Leach.

IN response the Shanghai captain hinted that when they came down next time they would enjoy a two-day match with the K.C.C., and expressed the hope that this

ONLY ON A BETTER WICKET: HAPPY MATCH AT THE K.C.C.

R. ABBIT ADMIRES INTERPORTERS—AND THE ACCOMMODATION

(By R. Abbit)

What I like about this regular fixture between the Shanghai side and the K.C.C. is the delightful holiday feeling that prevails. It has a spice of good old country cricket though the K.C.C. wicket is very much better than rural ones in England. There is none of the stern earnestness of the Interport.

It was very pleasant to visit the K.C.C. and find a chair and a table ready for me in my old corner under the trees far from the chatter of the crowd and the temptations of the Bar!

The game did not start until nearly eleven and Shanghai batted first. E. M. P. Williams and J. H. B. Leckie opening. Humphreys, by the way, stood down and E. C. Baker played. Burnett bowled from the Bowling Green end and Goodwin at the other. Both batsmen seemed comfortable and twenty went up, but then Williams got inside Burnett's swinging half volley and Frank Goodwin held him in the slips.

Leckie continued to bat very nicely, but at 37 Baker, who had only got five, was bowled by a beauty from Goodwin, which I think came in a lot.

Kermani came in and runs came quicker. He kept getting Burnett away to mid-wicket and I think the gap could, and should have been filled.

At 50, Willie Hung relieved Goodwin but his first over was all over the place and Leckie changed to all and on-drove one beautifully—all the strokes reaching the boundary.

At 70 Robert Lee relieved Burnett. Just before 90 went up both batsmen had lucky snicks, Leckie through the slips off Hung and Kermani between his legs and the wicket off Lee.

THE STAND BROKEN

With 90 on the board Smith relieved Hung and had Leckie L.B.W. on his first delivery, 95-3-40. It was a very bright and breezy knock. Stokes joined Kermani who had become rather quiet. Lee bowled very steadily and fielded excellently to his own bowling, stopping some quick returns.

The hundred was hoisted after about an hour's play. Just after Smith had a bad over and Kermani had a couple of nice fours to leg presented to him. Goodwin relieved him and bowled an excellent maiden to Stokes who was not batting nearly as confidently as he had done in the Interport. Ernie Fincher threw the wicket down beautifully from cover and Kermani was only just in.

At 144 Stokes brought his stroke right round when hitting Goodwin and broke his wicket. 144-1-20. Later Kermani hit the same bowler twice running for six square leg but the ball was only to carry the cinder track it is not such a big hit. Runs continued pretty quickly until 150 was taken. 220 runs were up. Kermani being not out 86, and Jenkins 23. The latter had played nice free cricket.

AFTER Tiffin

Jenkins hit Goodwin's first ball to square leg for four and played out the over. Burnett bowled at the other end. In Goodwin's second over he bowled Jenkins with a good un. 233-6-27. Leach started bustling from the start but he was well caught by Hung at first slip off Lee after he had scored 0. 244-6-6.

The order was changed and Elliott came in, but in Goodwin's next over he skied the ball over his head to be caught by Hung running across from slip—249-7-6.

Harry Madar came next, and in the next over Kermani completed his century amid much applause. Runs came freely now and Kermani hit six and a four off consecutive balls from Goodwin. The innings was declared closed at 271 for seven. Kermani 115 not out. A very fine innings.

K. C. C. BAT.

Kowloon started at 2.55 p.m. and Williams bowled the first over. Lay had a four to leg and a three to third man, but the batsmen had a four to leg and a single. Baker bowled at the other end. Thirty went up after four overs.

Stokes went on for Williams at the Pavilion end, and Elliott at the other. While Williams relieved Kermani behind the stumps, Hung slowed a bit but then Lay drove Elliott for four and next ball had a five all run at long on. Both batsmen were playing most confidently.

Pat Madar relieved Stokes with the score at 60, but Lay played him confidently. So did Mackay but he finally hit a full-on to Jenkins on the square leg boundary. 71-2-26.

E. F. Fincher then came in and Lay then completed his fifty with a strong off drive. Booth then went on for Elliott—much to my surprise as he had a badly damaged first finger joint in his bowling hand. He clearly was bowling under difficulties. He bowled one over and then Donald Leach relieved him, and clean bowled Ernie Fincher with his second ball. 92-2-6. Tea was then taken.

Leach and Madar bowled after tea and Lay hit the latter to mid wicket—and Lay hit the latter to mid wicket. (Continued on Page 9.)

GERMANY'S PLANS

As a game that will draw the crowds and contribute generously to the enormous organising costs, it is only natural that football should figure prominently in the next Olympic Games.

Germany, the country responsible for the 1936 Olympiad, is terribly anxious for a strong entry for the football tournament.

To secure this she has appointed as one of the chief organisers our refereeing friend, Dr. P. J. Bauwens, one of the most-travelled men in Europe and one of the game's leading ambassadors.

And scarcely does he complete the details than France says she will not enter for the Soccer at any price.

OUTSPOKEN

Germany is one country where football is genuinely amateur, but that does not stop the French from saying what they think.

And without waiting until June, the closing date for entries, France has withdrawn already, declaring that half the amateurs in the football games will be disguised professionals.

England found that out long ago, which is why this country has stood out of all the post-war Olympic football competitions.

STILL IN DOUBT

It is said that "broken time," which means the repayment to players of money lost in wages, will not be permitted.

The Germans will observe this condition to the letter, but that does not remove the doubts about some others who will compete.

The situation is a delicate one. I should like to see the England jersey on the Olympic field. We have over a million registered amateur players, to say nothing of the millions who are unregistered.

A country which is such a power in the game is entitled more than any other to take its place in an Olympic tournament.

But unless everything is going to be above board it would be better for us to keep out.

QUEER PSYCHOLOGY OF FOOTBALLERS

(By F. M. Carruthers)

The footballer is a peculiarly fitting subject for the psycho-analyst. He would find many perplexing problems in the dressing-room.

Why should a player or even a team of proved ability suddenly, and without apparent reason decline? At once Aston Villa in their present disturbing position come to mind.

Some day we may have specially appointed officials to study the mental reactions of the men to the game. Soon after Mr. John Cochrane came from Scotland to manage the Sunderland club he decided that success in English football was made up of 75 per cent of the players and 25 per cent of the manager. The remainder he was pleased to attribute to skill.

A MENTAL OPERATION

There is no doubt that so far as the trained professional is concerned, the game to-day is more a mental than a physical operation.

Mr. Herbert Chapman was a psychologist. He spent much of his time in trying to find out the thoughts of everyone—his players and rival officials. "I want to know what they are thinking about," he used to say.

He knew all about the private lives of his players, not through idle curiosity, but in order that he might understand them and help them to their own success as well as his own as a manager. It was through the knowledge he acquired that he was able to inspire them and increase their value 50 per cent.

CASE OF BIRKETT

One of the most interesting psychological studies at the present time is Birkett, the young Middlesbrough outside right, who played for England against Ireland.

As a member of the Arsenal team his future seemed unpromising. I feared in fact that he might join that big band of players who make the chance and take out a living in undistinguished company.

Then came his transfer and freedom from the domination of all the stars at Highbury. The Holmes and the Bastins had overwhelmed him and given him a sense of inferiority, and I can imagine him sitting in the train on the way to his new club and saying to himself: "I'm as good as they are at Middlesbrough. I'll show them."

Probably without realising the mental relief which his transfer gave him Birkett became a new man, a confident footballer with a belief in himself.

This is the change which has taken place, and it has been so tremendous that it has lifted him from a position of obscurity into an English international in two or three months.

Club Eleven Beat Destroyers

The Hongkong Hockey Club 1st eleven defeated the 2nd Destroyers 11-0 by two goals to nil in a hockey match played at King's Park yesterday.

The game was fast, and although beaten the sailors put up a keen struggle, and it was not until the second half that the Club were able to score.

In the first half the Club came very near to scoring on several occasions but the sailors put up a steady defence.

After the interval, the Club scored twice through G. E. R. Divett.

On the Marina ground, the Club de Recreio drew with the second battery of the Hongkong and Singapore Brigade, R.A. each team scoring twice.

The Recreio were one man short, but despite this they put up a creditable performance. The game being fast and even. The Gunners were the first to open the scoring after about ten minutes' play, but shortly afterwards, the Portuguese equalised through A. S. Xavier. The interval arrived with the score at one-nil.

In the second half, the Gunners attacked strongly, and gained the lead almost at once. The Recreio players then took up the offensive and after several raids drew level from a corner, F. Nolasco netting.

for four. Hung was batting at the other end. Jenkins then came on for Madar and had Hung caught at the wicket after a two had been scored 104-3-5. R. Lee succeeded. But things were now going wrong for the K.C.C. and at 11 Jenkins bowled Arthur Lay with a beauty. He had played a fine forcing innings of 71. Burnett had three through the slips, and then enacted Leach to long-off for four and repeated it to long on. He was pretty rough with him next over too, and also hit Jenkins very hard. 130 went up and Pat Madar relieved Leach, and got Leo caught at backward point by Stokes. 135-5-5. Runs still came freely until Jenkins caught Burnett at long off from one of Pat Madar's deliveries. 154-6-32. A fine sloping innings. Gittins came in and hit his first ball to extra for four. Leach was on at the Pavilion end and had Munn caught in the slips 164-7-0. Goodwin smote the ball hard but it usually went to hand, and then he was magnificently caught by Stokes at long leg off Leach. The catch was taken six inches above the ground as the fieldman was running across. 172-8-5. Smith was caught at the wicket for a duck at the same total, and Jex fell three balls later, very well taken at cover.

SERIAL STORY

DONNA THE BIG TOP

by BEULAH POYNTER

CHAPTER XXVIII

In his first anger over Con's callousness and the shock of Madeline's death Renfro had meant what he said when he dismissed the animal trainer. Soon, however, showmanship dominated sentiment and after three performances without Con's animal act Renfro had reason to repent his hasty action. He therefore sent word for Con to return.

A message from the hotel where the animal trainer had stayed brought the information that he had checked out immediately after his wife's funeral and that he had left no forwarding address.

Renfro made a round of the hotels but could find no trace of the performer. When the circus left New Orleans, therefore, it departed minus several lions, tigers and their trainer. A period of rainy weather set in. Everyone in the troupe was downhearted and ridden with the superstition that bad luck was haunting the show. Since expenses were eating up all profit and there were only a few more dates to be played before closing for the winter, Renfro posted a notice that these engagements had been cancelled. Hence the circus did not reach Montgomery and Con failed to receive the letter Donna sent there.

The midwest took a train directly to New York where they joined a large vaudeville act made up of tiny folks like themselves, playing the circuit of the eastern cities. Later they would embark for Germany, to what was called the "hot dog" section of Bavaria where so many of their kind first saw the light of day.

Two of the clowns who worked in the clothing business during the winter months went farther west. The men and women booked for the rodeo hurried on to their other show, but the majority of the troupe travelled to Chicago. Con had managed to elude Renfro; he was still in New Orleans. He had become a victim of remorse, finding (now that she was dead) that he had really cared for the girl who had given him her whole-hearted devotion. His ambition to become a star in "big time" was lessened by the death of the Bengali tigress, and he was in a numbed, sullen condition, refusing to take stock either of the present or the future.

He had checked out of the hotel where he and Madeline had stayed because the walls seemed to echo his dead wife's voice and he could see her in the shadows and in every hallway. Always she looked as she had that last night—white-faced and terrified, about to enter the cage with the tigress. Over and over again Con could hear Renfro's accusation, "You killed her!"

He knew that it was true. It had been nothing more than a desire to push Madeline for her past folly that had impelled him to force her to go through the act alone with Lucy. Madeline had not been ready to do that. She would never have been ready, for only his presence in the cage beside her had given her courage and confidence. Con knew all that now.

Moving away from the hotel, he soon found, could not erase the memories that haunted him. He thought of Madeline as she had been on the motor trip to New Orleans, laughing and gay. She had said, "If we could only go on like this forever!" and he had answered curtly, "There had been other times like that, and remorse for it overwhelmed him, now that it was too late. Madeline had been loyal. He knew how terrified she had been during those first days of entering the lions' cage. Yet she had gone through with it. She had done it because Con asked her to. Yes, Madeline had loved him. Temperamental, with but little sentiment in his nature, Con was still not quite so hard-hearted or callous of feelings as he had appeared. Consequently he suffered because he had never been disappointed man; a small amount of liquor intoxicated him; he could forget that by drinking he could forget and from the time he settled into a boarding house that had once been a stately mansion until he left the city he did not draw a completely sober breath.

The little Creole woman who owned the boarding house and who had established "a home for the depths" pitied him from the depths of her sentimental heart. She made overtures of friendliness which Con ignored and she murmured often, "Such a pity! He's going to the dogs and who can blame him? So young to lose his wife that way! They were little more than bride and groom. There were days on end when Con did not appear in the shabby, genteel dining room, when he ate what food he wanted from "hot dog" wagons or munched "lambs" that he bought on the streets.

There were nights when, bleary-eyed and uncertain in his walk, he wandered along the river bank until, overcome by exhaustion, he would fling himself upon the levee and sleep there until daylight awakened him.

Once so immaculate in his appearance, so clean shaven and handsome, Con looked now like a hunched, shabby creature. He had lost all his sympathy, began to think that she would have to ask him to leave her boarding house.

Then one day a glimpse of his unshaven cheeks, his pasty-lipped skin and hollow eyes jerked Con back to sanity. He paid his bills, packed his trunks and took the first train for Chicago.

On the long trip he took stock of his possessions. He had a little money, but funeral expenses and days of dissipation had eaten a large hole in his wallet. Obviously he could not remain in Chicago all winter with nothing to do. An engagement in "big time" vaudeville was out of the question now. He was not that there were many performers with a better act than his—even minus Madeline and the tigers—but the time when bookings should have been made was now past. Con had spent it idling about New Orleans.

He landed in Chicago during a snow storm and promptly was taken down with a severe attack of grippe. It left him with a cough and a feeling of complete fatigue that made him postpone daily any attempt to go to work.

Ordinarily he had found vaudeville bookings easy to secure, but for some reason there seemed to be very few theatre managers who were willing to pay the price Con was obliged to demand for his act. The Con assured himself, must be due to the fact that Renfro had spread the news that he was temperamental and difficult to handle and that he had walked out on the circus.

Business was not good, the agents told him. Pictures drew better than vaudeville and a good single did as much to fill a house as an animal act, which entailed much greater expense.

Con, anyway, where there were facilities for taking care of the animals. Small theatres lacked the space necessary. Con heard the same objections over and over.

Perhaps, had conditions been different he would not have given Amos Siddal and his farm so much as a thought, but after several days of vain attempts to find employment it occurred to the animal trainer that there should be a welcome for Madeline's husband at the farm. It would also be cheaper to recuperate there from his illness. A farm should have plenty of fresh milk, fresh eggs and little excitement.

Besides that he could see Donna again. This idea intrigued Con. He could see how she and her farmer husband were making out. Probably she would not offer him a very cordial welcome. On the other hand, she might be bored by the time with the life she had been leading. If that were true she would receive her old friend with open arms.

Con knew how Madeline and Donna had hood-winked Amos Siddal by exchanging identities. Now he decided that, unless she had admitted the truth to the family, it was high time she should be compelled to do so. When Grandfather Siddal died the fortune he left to his grandchild would, by rights belong to Madeline's husband.

Thus Con reasoned himself into a frame of mind that sent him to a ticket agency to buy a ticket to Lebanon. There was no use, he decided, to send word to the farm that he was coming. He wanted to get the lay of the land before he walked in on them.

He was not conscious of any desire to injure Donna as he made these plans. If anyone were to say he thought, it would be her husband, Philibert, by the many blows he had received in the past few months. Con centred his rancour on the man who, he felt, had robbed him of the only woman he had ever really loved.

That Donna had never cared for him did not matter, or the fact that if the blonde lay at anyone's door, it lay at Madeline's.

Con argued that Donna had married someone else and, because of this, the whole structure of his future had fallen.

Some men become big with adversity, develop muscles of character and principles, but Con David shrivelled and lost the decency that had carried him far in his chosen profession.

On the trip to Lebanon he visited himself as Donna's husband and the master of the Siddal property. He saw Bill Siddal, grasping his heart out with disappointment. This picture seemed to please Con mightily.

NOTES FROM THE THEATRES

The screen's most elaborate costume, costing $6,500, is worn by Grace Moore in one of the sequences of her new Columbia musical drama, "Love Me Forever," a musical drama which is showing simultaneously at Alhambra and King's from to-day to Saturday. The costume weighs seventy-five pounds and took more than twenty persons six weeks to make. Ten experts are doing nothing but embroidering the costume. It is worn by Miss Moore in one of the musical sequences. The bottom of the skirt is eight feet in diameter. The weight was so great that Miss Moore could not get up the stairs without shoulder straps but had to have a special wide girder constructed so that the weight of the costume could be suspended from her waist. A steel foundation was constructed by the Columbia engineering department. Over it were placed bolts of steel, over and nickel thread, workers in the wardrobe department spent weeks attaching several thousand small glass mirrors to the costume. Many thousands of seed pearls were strung on it. It also is featured by the hooded embellishment of more than three hundred white ostrich feathers.

"Love Me Forever," like "One Night of Love," was directed by Victor Scherzinger. Miss Moore is supported by Leo Carrillo, Michael Bartlett and Robert Allen.

"Every Night at Eight"

Film producers having lured many celebrities from the radio world, are now launching a counter attack with an offer in the form of a five-year singing contract to three motion picture actresses providing they will give up all screen work. Alice Faye, Frances Langford and Patsy Kelly, principals appearing opposite George Raft in Walker Wanger's Paramount musical comedy drama "Every Night at Eight," scheduled to open at Queen's Theatre at an early date, received the radio proposal from Raymond Patco, western musical Director of the Columbia Broadcasting Company. Patco became enthusiastic about the singing of the "Girls after witnessing a preview of "Every Night at Eight" in which they appear as a sister singing trio. Miss Langford and Miss Faye, both proteges of Rudy Vallee, were known on the air before entering films. Miss Kelly has been singing on the Hollywood Hotel Hour major radio programme in addition to her picture work. Miss Kelly is the surprise member of the group as she is known to film fans only as a comedian and not a singer, although she won fame on Broadway as musical-comedy favourite.

"Dante's Inferno"

"Dante's Inferno," one of the most startling dramas ever produced by the motion picture industry, comes on Sunday to the King's Theatre, with scenes of unmatched spectacle and soul-stirring sights that leave one breathless in their mighty sweep. The thrilling adventure of Dante in his journey through the Inferno, as recorded in that greatest of all literary classics, "The Divine Comedy," is pictured for the first time on the talking screen as an expression of a modern story theme, and becomes one of the greatest spectacles ever attempted. The screen play is the drama of a modern transgressor which utilizes the symbolism of hell, as expounded in the Dante classic to illustrate its theme. It provides for an amazingly graphic pictorial reproduction of that great spectacle in sequence in which kindly character and devoted love are the main themes. The story is the classic to the principal character, Spencer Tracy, in an effort to make him see the error of his ways and visualizes for him, drawing his images from the engraved illustrations in the book, the story of Dante's journey through the Inferno, as recorded in that greatest of all literary classics, "The Divine Comedy," is pictured for the first time on the talking screen as an expression of a modern story theme, and becomes one of the greatest spectacles ever attempted. NANKING LEADERS' TRIBUTE TO SUN YAT-SEN

When the Sixth Plenary of the Central Executive and Supervisory Committees began its session leading figures of the Central Government at Nanking paid a visit to the Dr. Sun Yat-sen Mausoleum on the famous Purple Mountain. Our picture shows them descending the stone staircase leading to Dr. Sun's tomb. General Chiang Kai-shek, in uniform, is seen in the front of the picture while Mr. Lin Sen, chairman of the National Government, is seen on his right, holding a cane.

Owing to the absence of the fleet no special naval display was possible in Hongkong in honour of the Duke of Gloucester's wedding. But in Shanghai H.M.S. Dorsetshire was completely illuminated at night, attracting crowds of spectators on the Bund. Ship's officers held a reception in the evening.

An important Japanese Navy Conference, especially in view of the present tension in the North was held on board the Iwate, the flagship of the Third Fleet, last week, attended by Captain T. Honda, who had arrived from North China aboard the Hosen Maru the same afternoon, Admiral G. Hyakutake, Commander of the Third Fleet, Admiral T. Sugisaka, commander of the Eleventh Squadron, Admiral S. Shimomura, commander of the Fifth Destroyer Squadron, Admiral T. Araki, commander of the Japanese Landing Force, and other naval officers stationed in Shanghai, Nanking, Hankow, Poochow, Tsingtao, Canton, Peiping, etc. This picture was taken just before the conference started. In the centre of the first row is Admiral Hyakutake.

OLD REGIME PASSING

Manila, Nov. 14.

This City presents a gay and colourful appearance on the last day of the old regime. Crowds, including many thousands of visitors from the provinces, throng the streets which are decorated with coloured lights, flags and bunting.

This morning Governor General Murphy delivered his last speech as Governor before the joint session of the Legislature, briefly reviewing the islands' history since the advent of Americans. He emphasised the sound condition of the government's finances.

He will take the oath as High Commissioner before Mr. George Dern, U.S. War Minister, this afternoon. Cavalry will escort him from the Malacanang Palace to the Manila Hotel where he will temporarily reside. He will be visited by the chiefs of the Army, Navy and Air Force at the hotel.

The inauguration of President Quezon and the Commonwealth Government takes place to-morrow and will be followed by a day of festival and carnival, parades, games, concerts, and concluding with a ball which will last all night.—Reuter.

WOLFRAM ORE TRANSACTION

BODIKER CASE RESUMED

MR. E. M. BRYDEN QUESTIONED

Further evidence was heard by the Chief Justice, Sir Atholl MacGregor, in the Supreme Court this morning when the case in which the Ying Wah Co., of Canton, is claiming $68,500 from Messrs. Bodiker and Co., as damages for alleged wrongful conversion, was continued.

Mr. Eldon Potter, K.C., instructed by Mr. E. S. C. Brooks, appeared for the plaintiff firm, and the defendants were represented by Mr. Leo D'Almada, Jnr., instructed by Mr. J. T. Prior.

The plaintiffs alleged that the defendants wrongfully converted half of the wolfram ore stored in their place as security against a loan of $97,440, and that the defendants took advantage of their property, gambled in exchange, and put the difference in their pockets. The defence contended that the conversion of the goods was in accordance with an oral agreement whereby they had the right to do so.

Mr. E. M. Bryden, chartered accountant, of Messrs. Lowe, Bingham and Matthews, who had been called by the plaintiffs at the previous hearing to state the implications, from an accountancy point of view of the transaction between the parties, on being cross-examined by Mr. D'Almada, said that, according to the facts given him, he had come to the conclusion that the defendants were accountable to the plaintiffs for $68,500, less deductions.

ACTED AS AGENTS

Mr. D'Almada: Messrs. Bodiker were shipping on plaintiffs' risk and account: what meaning do you attach to these words?—It seems that Bodiker's were shipping in the sense of agents in that they would protect their principals by fixing exchange.

The ore was arranged to be sold at optional ports and it was not sold before it was shipped from Hongkong?—Yes.

Does it follow that the proceeds of the sale, $5,814, is the amount to which the plaintiffs are entitled, less certain deductions?—Yes, but the proceeds were already converted into dollars.

Another reason why you say Messrs. Bodiker acted as agents was that they charged two per cent. commission?—Yes.

It might have been commission charged for other circumstances?—Yes, it might.

The defendants lent $97,000 to the plaintiffs on security of the ore, and the Hongkong Bank advanced a loan to the defendants against the same goods. The latter transaction would not concern the plaintiffs, would it?—No, if the defendants could give a bill of lading that the goods were their own.

If you take it from me that the defendants had a right to sub-pledge these goods to the Bank, it would not concern the plaintiffs?—It would not if the defendants had the right to sub-pledge the goods to the Bank without consulting the plaintiffs.

You have borrowed $68,500 for which the goods are pledged: you have sold the goods for $5,200, and you fix exchange the same day in order to avoid exchange risks in meeting your bill of exchange?—You could, but it is very unusual. But, in a narrow sense, I see your point.

USE OF CONTRACTS

In re-examination, Mr. Potter suggested to the witness that if Messrs. Bodiker were sending home goods on account of the plaintiffs, they really ought not to use their own exchange contracts at all, unless the plaintiffs consented to it. The ordinary way would be to go into the market on that day and fix exchange.

The witness agreed.

Mr. D'Almada: That is, if you are liable at the other end.

Mr. Potter: Who is liable?

Mr. D'Almada: I put it to the witness that Bodiker's are liable.

Mr. Potter (to the witness): The assumption on which your evidence is given—and if the assumption is correct I should not have a word to say—the assumption is that the plaintiffs, having instructed Bodiker to consign on his account to Hamburg (which is what Mr. D'Almada puts) that that entitles Messrs. Bodiker to do what they please with regard to the financing of it; to make use of the plaintiffs' goods for the purpose of drawing a bill and changing it to $68,500 locally.

You may take it that we repudiate that as a matter of law. That will be argued later. What the mortgagee does when he sub-pledges is to get the money by depositing the property with the Bank.

Against the loan a sum of $50,000 is repaid; against the overdraft to the bank $50,000 is repaid. Against the overdraft

FEVERISH ELECTION ACTIVITY

CAMPAIGN DRAWS TO CLOSE

London, Nov. 13.

While Government parties are optimistic with the regard to the results of the election, general uneasiness is expressed with respect to the chances of at least four Cabinet Ministers, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, Mr. Godfrey Collins, Sir Kingsley Wood and Mr. Walter Elliot.

Opposition Labour circles show increasing optimism, and hope to bring back to Parliament most of their leaders who lost their seats in 1931, and with greatly increased forces to play a really effective part in opposition.—Reuter.

CLOSING CAMPAIGN

London, Nov. 13.

All parties in the General Election held final eye-of-poll meetings to-night, and the candidates' agents and their assistants will be working into the early hours of the morning, putting into final shape the records of the canvasses of each constituency which has been carried out in the last week by voluntary helpers of each party.

A picturesque touch is added to these feverish last-minute preparations by the case of an elector whose name was omitted from the electoral register by a printer's error and had his right to vote to-morrow restored to him at the last possible moment by a rule absolute and peremptorily made this afternoon against the registration officer by the King's Bench Divisional Court.

Polling begins in many constituencies at seven o'clock to-morrow morning and in all at eight. Then begins the task of each candidate's organisation to get as many as possible of its supporters to poll, and party headquarters have made an urgent appeal to sympathisers for help with motor cars.

ESTIMATES VARY

The newspapers are full of estimates of the results, which vary widely, and the only safe prediction, perhaps, is that whatever happens the results will not be so spectacular as in the last election, when 225 members of the previous Parliament lost their seats and 13 cabinet ministers were defeated.

Counting will begin immediately after the close of the poll in over 200 constituencies, but in the remainder it will be postponed till Friday. All but a few scattered results will be known by Friday evening. It is expected that about 100 results will be known by mid-night to-morrow.

The B.B.C. announces that a talk by Mr. Martyn Threlfall, London correspondent of the Sydney Morning Herald, on the General Election will be broadcast in Transmission One on November 14, at 10.00 G.M.T. A similar talk by Mr. A. E. Holdsworth in Transmission 3 will be broadcast at 13.15 G.M.T.—British Wireless.

They also get a credit for $68,500, and that is produced by drawing a bill against the plaintiff's goods. That is the transaction you are treating as tantamount to a sale?—Witness: Yes, an agency sale.

AGENCY SALE

That is to say that it is a realisation at once of the possible value of the goods?

Witness: A realisation. It is a matter for the Judge, but would you as a business man say you could divorce that from the plaintiff's? That is, a realisation of their goods would not concern Ying Wah? The basis of your evidence is that what Messrs. Nodgen get for the goods goes to the owners?

Witness: Yes. Your position is that you cannot divorce the sterling bill and its realisation into dollars at that time from the whole transaction?

Witness: Not under the circumstances.

Cheung Wal-chuen, one of the two partners of the plaintiff firm, stated that as soon as he had effected the sale for the remainder of the ore with the Yee Kee Hong firm, he went and saw Mr. Bodiker for the purpose of redeeming same and at the same time to return the balance of the loan. Mr. Bodiker then told him that he had shipped the ore to Europe and that it was of no use to return him the money.

Cross-examined by Mr. D'Almada, witness denied that he asked Mr. Bodiker for an offer for the ore.
